From the Editors

How CAN 50 years fall away before your eyes? Anyone who saw film director Peter Jackson's Beatles epic Get Back will understand the power of new technology to transport us across time and space to swinging London in 1969.

Viewers of the seven-hour series were whisked back in time to Twickenham Film Studios and later, exhilaratingly, to the rooftop of Apple Corps as we watched the most famous band in the world playing and joshing with each other as they laid down the tracks for their final album, Let It Be.

The pictures and the soundtrack felt fresh and new – remixed, re-mastered and revived by the computer wizardry that Jackson had developed for They Shall Not Grow Old, his film that brought colour to film footage of the First World War. In Get Back the only figures who appeared dated were the bobbies in Savile Row and the ladies in headscarves staring up at the commotion on the roof. The Beatles looked like four young men from Liverpool who had just strolled into vision.

Now we are about to witness the same trick as the technology used on Get Back has been applied to a recording originally made by John Lennon in 1970, added to by the remaining Beatles in 1995, and completed by Paul and Ringo in 2022. The result is a new song, Now and Then, with an accompanying video made by Peter Jackson. We tell the full story of the last Beatles song on page 12.

The Beatles remain a band for all time and for those who want to dive headlong into their rich archive there's no better place to start than on the BBC this weekend on BBC1, BBC2, Radio 2 and Sounds. But if you want the thrill of the new, then listen to Now and Then. Having enjoyed a preview RT can confirm the last Beatles song sounds as if it were made yesterday.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE

David Tennant makes his long-awaited return to Doctor Who later this month, but he's not the Doctor he once was. Instead, he will appear as the new, 14th incarnation of the Time Lord, following on from Jodie Whittaker, complete with a new sonic screwdriver and a new Tardis.

So why does Tennant's Doctor look strikingly similar to his former self? "The casual viewer might think I'm wearing the same costume as 15 years ago," the 52-year-old actor told RT in the summer, "but anyone who is more of a fan will see that it's actually a bit of a radical redesign."

Instead of his earlier Doctor's brown suit with blue pinstripes, Tennant now sports a custom patterned waistcoat and trousers, with a similarly bespoke blue coat (replacing his tan one) and knitted silk tie. His trademark Converse trainers are still in place, but the old cream and red colours have been swapped for a more muted grey. "There was a lot of debate about that," says Tennant. "Do we wear the same type of shoes? Or do we do a variation on a theme?"

The costume, designed by Pam Downe, may be familiar – it's still a suit, long overcoat and trainers, after all – but features different colours, tailoring and materials that speak to the years that have passed since Tennant's time on the show. "It is a very different costume, but it tells the same sort of story as the last one," he says. "The same but different' was our watchword."

And happily, the outfit has passed one key test with fans – despite the custom elements, they have managed to start making their own. "I've already met several people in very excellent re-creations of it," says Tennant. HUW FULLERTON

SUPER SONIC

TINIE & NAOMI SCHIFF

Channel 4's car-crazy duo on the timeless appeal of the Vauxhall Corsa

Award-winning rapper Tinie (who dropped Tempah from his stage name in 2020) swaps music for wheels in Channel 4's Bangers: Mad for Cars, with co-presenter and racing driver Naomi Schiff. "Bangers" – or "modern classic" cars – from the 80s, 90s and 00s are having a resurgence. The duo put cars through a performance check, a history lesson and chat to celebrity car-lovers. But this is a new (wheel) spin on the car show format...

Tinie, you've presented Channel 4 property show Outrageous Extensions and BBC arts series Extraordinary Portraits. Why do a car show now?

TINIE Music has given me the creative licence to explore other interests in presenting – but I always said my ultimate TV gig would be car-related. I've driven and owned loads of incredible cars. That said, I don't think I could ever give up music to do presenting full-time. But it's nice to know it's something I can jump into!

What makes Bangers different?

NAOMI I grew up watching Top

NAOMI SCHIFF

IT'S A RAP
Tinie performs at Radio 1's Big Weekend in 2010

Gear and I used to watch Pimp My Ride on MTV, hosted by rapper Xzibit, but I think our show is more accessible. Car culture isn't exclusive to middle-aged white men, but this type of show hasn't really been explored by people from a different demographic.

Why are "modern classic" cars making a comeback?

NAOMI These cars are timeless, there's something nostalgic about them. They have a lot of character, and the quality just baffles me.

TINIE Most cars today are black, white or grey, whereas these cars have different colours and shapes that turn heads. When I was 16 or 17, it was normal for boy racers to buy little hatchbacks for £500 and refit them for £3,000. It made no sense, but it's very much a thing in British culture. A Renault Clio Williams wasn't expensive at the time – now enthusiasts are buying them up and making them rarer.

Tinie, were you a boy racer?

TINIE My first car was a Vauxhall Corsa, which I remodelled when I was 17. I bought a stereo/DVD player that popped out and added all these blue LED lights I could recess into certain parts of the car. I changed the exhaust as well. When my music career took off, I could afford nicer cars that I didn't have to modify. Now, I love tech in hit it off. It's not often that you see people of colour in the motorsport space, so we were drawn to each other. That's sad, but also great – there's a lot of camaraderie. When Tinie came up with this concept, he called me to get me involved. TINIE When I met Naomi, I was overwhelmed. She's phenomenal at what she does. And she's obviously a much better driver than me!

Naomi, as a woman, did motorsports seem inaccessible?

NAOMI A hundred per cent. I was definitely held back because of my gender, more so than my race. The sport is still geared towards young men but, thankfully, the industry is changing – at a snail's pace, but nonetheless, it's moving forward.

How did you get your famous quests on board?

TINIE I called Ian Wright and Tom Kerridge with my producer hat on. I was stepping out of my comfort zone so I was a bit nervous, thinking, "What am I going to say?"

NAOMI I visited [comedian] Guz Khan and he could talk me under the table about cars. If there was a spin-off for a show with celebs who love cars, it would be such a vibe.

Tinie, do you listen to your own music in the car?

TINIE In the studio, you can listen to the same song 100 times in one night, so after it's finished, I'm done with it for a while.

Your song Pass Out came out in 2010. Are you a modern classic?

TINIE I would say I'm evergreen! I'm 34 now and I've been making music since I was 15, but I'm just about to come into my prime as a human being – there's still so much to come. I'm always making music; I'll probably release some next year. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

With the focus on emissions and sustainability, is it controversial to be a petrolhead now?

NAOMI Obviously, there are electric vehicles, different forms of fuel, but we can always do things better. I don't think we know the best solution; classic cars won't be it, but we all try to do our bit.

TINIE This show promotes the fact that these cars have been loved before – like a second-hand jumper.

WHAT IT'S LIKE...

to win Britain's Got Talent

Norwegian clown and comedian Viggo Venn won the 16th series of ITV1's Britain's Got Talent earlier this year, much to the chagrin of Simon Cowell. Now he's taking his show on the road – and, yes, he was wearing his trademark hi-vis vest for our interview.

HI VIS, LOW EXPECTATIONS

I was really bad at stand-up, so I went to clown school. This sounds like a joke, but I applied to Britain's Got Talent to become more visible. It was always my dream to do the UK comedy circuit. After lots of open-mic gigs, I needed to move up a level and BGT sounded like fun. My plan was to reveal a final red hi-vis when the judges hit their buzzers – I'd be like, "Ha, I knew!" – but here I am.

YOU'RE UNDER A-VEST The hi-vis vests started at Melbourne International Comedy Festival. I wasn't invited to an artists' party, so I put on a hi-vis and walked straight in. People noticed, so I started wearing them in the show, gradually adding more.

SIMON SAYS People think the show is edited or staged, but Simon Cowell really didn't like me. When he buzzed me, something came down from the comedy gods and I improvised a line: "Simon, a grumpy face like that in Norway means you're doing really well." I've since seen people back home with that on T-shirts.

VESTED INTERESTS My evil plan was to take revenge on Simon in the semi-final. We had 4,000 vests for everyone – judges, crew, audience – except Simon. He grabbed one because he was enjoying it, and on impulse, I took his vest. I was like, "No, you only get one if I get to the final!"

HI VIS!
Viggo Venn went on BGT to raise his profile

VENN AND NOW I never thought I'd reach the final, let alone win. I was so full of joy. I stayed up late celebrating, but had a show booked for the next day in front of 65 people at Big Belly Bar & Comedy Club in Vauxhall, London. They thought I'd cancel, but I was like, "Nope, I'm barely alive, but I'm here."

THE VIGGO VEST Having got through 8,000 vests on BGT, I teamed up with the biggest hi-vis factory in the UK. Norwegian footballer Erling Haaland is sponsored by Nike... well, I signed with Workwear Express! If you buy the Viggo Vest, they make a donation to the Lighthouse Construction Charity. People send me videos every day. There was one of a wedding with all the guests in hi-vis vests!

A VEST FIT FOR A KING

My goal for the Royal Variety Performance is to get King Charles in a hi-vis. I've already presented a hi-vis to the mayor of my hometown and the British ambassador, so I'm working my way up. And I'm going to audition for BGT again next year, just to see Simon's face "One! More! Time!"

VIEWPOINT

WOMEN BEHAVING BADLY

tempestuous Scarlett O'Hara.

When I was young, I idolised Violet Brown of National Velvet, who was not rude, but was single-minded and oblivious to her own eccentricity. She left me with the idea that sometimes the only way to do what you want is not to be too worried about what anyone else thinks of you – a hard message to absorb when society is basically urging you to be A Good Girl.

I have been writing books for more than 20 years, and although my best-known character – Louisa Clark from Me before You – is very much a good person (kind, generous, always thinking of other people), it is, in truth, the worst behaved ones who have been the most fun to write. My last book, Someone Else's Shoes, featured Nisha Cantor, a 40-something trophy wife. She is obsessed by appearances, rude and quick to hit out. What has been fascinating to me in my years of working in books and films is how nervous people get about these women, who rarely feature in entertainment.

In the editing process I was repeatedly asked by my UK and US publishers to tone down Nisha Cantor's "unlikeability", for fear readers would feel alienated by her. I resisted. It was not the first time. Some of my most beloved characters are cantankerous, smart mouthed or unwilling to "behave". I'm quite comfortable with readers not liking a character, at least initially. I believe as long as they are compelling and interesting, the reader, or viewer, will come along for the ride. I think we have grown as a society in terms of what we will tolerate.

The 2012 global bestseller Gone Girl by Gillian Flynn was a harbinger of this change.

'Catherine Cawood is unforgiving, yet I wept for her'

The protagonist, Amy, is a monstrous creation; devious, strong-willed, fearless. She even manipulates the reader. More recently, one of TV's biggest successes has been Happy Valley. Sarah Lancashire's Catherine Cawood is grumpy, unforgiving, unglamorous and not beyond giving someone a belt. And yet I defy any viewer not to have wept for her. Since Sgt Cawood first arrived on our screens nine years ago, we've had Phoebe Waller-Bridge's flawed, narcissistic and self-destructive protagonist in Fleabag, psychopathic assassin Villanelle (Jodie Comer) in Killing Eve and Billie Piper's complicated and self-ish Suzie Pickles in I Hate Suzie.

IN MY NEW writing course for BBC Maestro, I tell writers to create characters who don't have to be good, but they do have to be interesting. There is something cathartic in allowing a character to behave in ways that you yourself never would, even more so if they are female.

And if fiction teaches us about how the world works, then unlikeable women are, to me, an important antidote to the saintly and sensible Lizzie Bennets and Elinor Dashwoods, the Wendy Darlings and the Cinderellas.

Sometimes simply being who you need to be is going to ruffle feathers. We still need nice characters on the page and on screen, but while they don't have to go at someone with a pickaxe, it's good to be reminded that it can be a joyful and liberating thing to watch a woman do something as radical as exactly what she chooses.

As seen on our cover photo taken by Brian Moody, Victoria Wood was pushing the framework of what was possible in comedy. Her TV sketch show As Seen on TV was back for a second series and Wood revealed her now-iconic hairdo to RT. "I had it cut in Manchester yesterday, and everyone down here in London was horrified. Wood found it hard to write returning favourite Acorn Antiques, as cast and crew had added their own gags as they went along in the first series: "In the end I did what I had done originally and wrote it completely straight as a very bad soap opera." MARK BRAXTON

PAUL MCCARTNEY

‘It was like John was there’

The Fab Four split in 1970, but now, thanks to Paul McCartney’s determination and Peter Jackson’s AI wizardry, something remarkable is happening – the release of a new Beatles song

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

IN THE WINTER of 1964, Derek Taylor, first and greatest of the spin doctors of pop, was engaged to write the sleeve notes of the Beatles’ fourth album Beatles for Sale. In this he offered a prediction.

He said it was inevitable that generations not yet born when he was typing would, at some point in the future, wish to understand the fuss about the Beatles. Faced with this question he advised against trying to explain about the hair or the screams. Instead, he said we should simply play them the records and “the kids of AD 2000 will draw from the music much the same sense of well-being and warmth as we do today.”

Now the kids of AD 2000 have kids of their own, but Derek Taylor’s words hold true, even if they only tell half the story. What Taylor couldn’t have been expected to foresee is just how much people far in the future would still yearn for that “sense of well-being and warmth”. Like a benign inherited condition, Beatlemania has been passed down the decades since, assisted by judicious nudges from marketing, facilitated by advances in technology and informed by a weather eye on the changes in public taste.

If you grew up in the 60s, if you were, so to speak, a Fabs OG, you probably counted out your adolescence in Beatles 45s, the precise order of which are as engraved in your memory as the birth order of your own children.

If you were a teenager in the 70s, you probably know the band through the prism of Mum and Dad’s copies of the Red and Blue double albums, which stood sentinel alongside so many music centres with their smoked-glass lids.

For the Smash Hits generation of the 80s, the death of John Lennon brought the realisation that the Double Fantasy chap had once been in a group with the leader of Wings and the further realisation that this group sometimes sounded a bit like ELO.

When Britpop arrived in the 90s it came not so much to bury the Fabs’ legacy as to raise it to new heights. Around the same time, the remaining “Threatles” told their story in their own way via the TV mini-series Anthology and its accompanying DVDs and compilation albums.

At the turn of the millennium, at the cresting of the CD boom, they released 1, another compilation album, which has sold more than 31 million copies and remains the only CD that most people under the age of 25 can remember.

Six years after that, original Beatles producer Sir George Martin and his son Giles were tasked with producing a “mash-up” of old Beatles recordings for a Las Vegas show called Love, to be performed by Cirque du Soleil. Giles Martin recalls thinking it wasn’t all that good >

‘It was the closest we’ll ever come to having John back in the room – it was very emotional’

RINGO STARR

◁ an idea, so he decided to make sure his work wasn't wasted by backing up all the original Beatles tapes and making musical notes about each of the original recordings.

Almost 17 years later Love is still running in Las Vegas with no end in sight, the business of the Beatles is still being run from a smart townhouse in Knightsbridge and Giles Martin is still working on new releases bearing the Beatles name.

The most recent is Now and Then. This was one of the John Lennon demos that Yoko Ono handed over in 1994 when Anthology was being made. The others were Free as a Bird and Real Love. At the time, the technology wasn't up to the task of separating Lennon's voice from his piano accompaniment so Now and Then was abandoned and, says McCartney, "left to languish in a cupboard".

THERE IT WOULD have remained had it not been for McCartney's work ethic. Having been impressed by how director Peter Jackson had managed to isolate all the individual voices from the mono tape recordings that went into his epic Beatles documentary series Get Back, he wondered if Jackson's machine assisted learning technology might do the same with this dusty cassette.

It turned out that it could. "There it was, John's voice, crystal clear," says McCartney in a short film made to mark the release. "It's quite emotional." Hence the record they're calling "the last Beatles song" will come out on 2 November.

It's always Paul. Ringo often reflects that the Beatles only made the number of records they did because Paul was always on the phone. It's little different 60 years later. Ringo says: "He called me up and said he'd like to work on Now and Then, what do you think? I think it's great. So he put the bass on, he sent the files to me, I put the drums on. It was the closest we'll ever come to having him back in the room so it was very emotional for all of us. It was like John was there, you know. It's far out."

All statements from Planet Beatle are careful to reflect the views of all four principals. George Harrison's widow Olivia says she has no doubt that her husband would have wholeheartedly supported the project, while John Lennon's son Sean said, "it's like a time capsule and all feels very meant to be".

But still the key Beatles fan is Paul. "We all play on it, it's a genuine Beatles recording. In 2023 to still be working on Beatles music, and about to release a new song the public haven't heard, I think it's an exciting thing. How lucky was I to have those men in my life and to work with those men so intimately and to come up with such a body of music."

The final piece of the puzzle is a video for Now and Then, directed by Peter Jackson; his first pop promo is an unashamed piece of fan fiction, in the timeless new dimension of hyper-reality.

Giles Martin remains more concerned with the sound than the pictures. "I thought it was really important that it sounds like the Beatles, and the Beatles would have put some backing vocals on it. But they're not there any more. So, I went through my notes. An 'oooh' is an 'ooh' and there are lots on Because and Here, There and Everywhere so we used some of them."

The 21 tracks that have been added to the 50th anniversary reissue of the Red and Blue albums were chosen with a view to redressing a previous imbalance between Lennon/McCartney and George Harrison songs. The inclusion of the likes of Tomorrow Never Knows, Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds, Dear Prudence and I Want You (She's So Heavy) reflects the trippier music favoured by today's Beatles streamers.

"The Red and Blue albums were the first Beatles albums I really knew," says Martin, who was born in 1969, the year his father produced Abbey Road and the Beatles began to wind up. "I went on a ski trip when I was about ten and a mate of mine had the cassettes so we pretended to be ill and listened to those."

ON THESE, the first reissues in what was then a novel technology called "stereo", the sound of the band was all in the left channel with the vocals over in the right. This neither did justice to the bracing whomp of the original mono singles nor matched the deep-pile sound of other 1973 releases like Pink Floyd's The Dark Side of the Moon.

Martin is pleased that today's technology doesn't merely allow the drums to be extracted from the original tape. "You can also de-mix the de-mix so that you have the different parts of the drum kit on separate tracks," he explains. "On Nowhere Man you can have the harmonies in stereo. I end up replaying Ringo's drums through a speaker on the floor of Studio Two at Abbey Road, then re-recording them. That's very eerie, if you go in the control room and the Beatles are playing downstairs."

No matter what the song says, there's no getting back. In the 60s all pop music sounded best at a fairground, where you could feel the bass. In the 70s Abbey Road became everyone's favourite Beatles album because you could play it alongside Fleetwood Mac. In the 80s people listening to Beatles CDs were thrilled by the absence of scratches. From the 90s most music was accessed on headphones. At each stage we

A PERSONAL HISTORY OF THE BEATLES

'I DUETTED WITH PAUL'

The Beatles run in my family, says Lauren Laverne

For three generations of Lauren Laverne's family, the Beatles haven't just been around now and then. They've been here, there and everywhere.

Ask the BBC 6 Music DJ and Desert Island Discs presenter how big a presence the Fab Four were for her growing up in the northeast, and her answer is unequivocal. "You can't overstate it."

"My mum first saw the Beatles [on 30 November] 1963 at Sunderland's Empire Theatre. So, really, she was there from the very beginning." So committed was young Celia Goffon to catching them that she "went on a date with a boy she didn't really like! But she got a Paul badge, because she was a big Paul McCartney fan. Which I now have in my jewellery box. I've worn it to interview Paul – I tucked it under my lapel."

Laverne's father, Leslie, was a huge fan, too, and his original vinyl copies of the band's LPs, battered relics "covered in jam and scratches", were the cherished soundtrack to Laverne's 80s childhood. "I wouldn't be able to tell you the first Beatles song I heard because it would have been before I can remember. They were always there."

As she was also raised on Beatles films watched "literally every day" on VHS, the band were formative in other ways, too.

Starting the band Kenickie in her teens with some college friends, Laverne thought their domestic routine would be akin to that of John, Paul, George and Ringo in 1965's musical comedy Help!. "Part of me expected to move into a terraced house where we all had our own front door, but inside we were all in one big house!" she laughs. "When we signed a record deal, we did all live together, living out that fantasy. The Beatles taught us how to be in a band, in a funny kind of way."

As an adult, Laverne has a more personal relationship with the band. She's met and interviewed Paul McCartney on several occasions and has even duetted with him twice. "In fact, one of the times I sang with Paul, I was pregnant with my eldest child." As for her 13-year-old, she reveals that he's "actually in school with one of the Beatles' grandkids! That's quite strange! So they have their own stories with the Beatles."

SHE LOVES YOU

have listened in a different way while kidding ourselves it's the same.

In 2011 Giles Martin was hired to mix the sound for Martin Scorsese's documentary George Harrison: Living in the Material World, "I was fired because they said 'Marty doesn't like your revisionist approach to music.' Four weeks later I was called back. I met Marty in a studio, we set up the film and I switched between my mix and the original. He said he preferred my mix and he couldn't understand why. I said, it's because it's never how you remember it being. Our brains adjust. We don't really listen to these things. We re-create them in our heads. My job is to mix a song so that it's how people remember it."

The real target audience, who are people like Giles Martin's teenage daughter, have no such memories to contend with. "I drive teenage girls around and I say, 'What's your favourite band?' and they say, 'They're called Fleetwood Mac – I don't know if you've heard of them.'"

"My daughter recently went on holiday with [actor] Dominic West's family, who are all massive Beatles fans. They were listening to Here, There and Everywhere. She was able to come back and say 'Dad, I actually like the Beatles!'"

Seems like Derek Taylor was right.

Now and Then will be released worldwide on 2 November at 2pm GMT. The Beatles 1962-1966 (The Red Album) and 1967-1970 (The Blue Album) 2023 edition are released on 10 November

So if Laverne herself were to get the Desert Island Discs treatment, the Beatles would be among her choices? "I could do a selection that was just Beatles songs! Even then it would be difficult to whittle it down. Where to start? Tomorrow Never Knows, which sounds futuristic even now. Baby You're a Rich Man – the optimism and joy of that. Here Comes the Sun, George at his very best. That's followed me through my life – my parents loved it, it was the first dance at my wedding and I sang it to my kids as a lullaby. Honestly, it's impossible. I could spend all day talking about this!"

Well, she would, but first she must go and have another listen to Now and Then (to read her verdict on the song, go to radiotimes.com/beatlessingle on 2 November once it has been released). In Laverne's view, the Fabs are "an international treasure who belong to us all. And how amazing to have a new jewel in the crown. I also think people really need those collective moments that bring us together. The Beatles are now doing that again in a time when those things are increasingly rare and precious." CRAIG McLEAN

On 1 November at 7pm, Lauren Laverne joins Alex Jones and Ronan Keating on The One Show to introduce the exclusive UK TV broadcast of the short film Now and Then – The Last Beatles Song. Also appearing in the studio will be producer Giles Martin EXCLUSIVE AND FINALLY...

As she prepares to leave Newsnight after 30 years, Kirsty Wark reflects on being a woman in TV, bullying at the BBC and the one interview she regrets

THE RT INTERVIEW BY LIBBY PURVES

SHE'S A LEADING figure in the TV landscape: a calm, unruffled Scottish demeanour accented with kindly irony and unfussy clothes; a Newsnight linchpin with no obvious interest in seeking either Paxman ferocity or Maitlis glamour, nor opinionising.

She sometimes turns up more lightly, as when she was star baker on a charity edition of The Great British Bake Off or made a brisk cameo appearance in Doctor Who, but her core is in hard, live, challenging news. She can convey disbelief or disapproval with an eyebrow, but tries not to (with one famous exception that we'll come to). For 30 years the nocturnal arena of Newsnight has been the heart of her work and renown, but now, at 68, Kirsty Wark has announced she will be leaving in order to focus on documentaries and her work on Radio 4.

We meet at the start of a Newsnight day, supposedly 2.30pm, but there's train trouble from her home in Glasgow and she's running late. She strides into the glassy caverns of New Broadcasting House in jeans, mildly dishevelled but totally up to date on the news, turns off her phone and offers me a cup of tea. She's patient and communicative, but we should hurry, she says – not least because, rather endearingly, she's looking forward to being in the office. "I do love briefings. I think that's how I was brought up. You always have impostor syndrome, but you do your homework, give good value.

"On The World at One [she was a producer on the Radio 4 programme in the 1980s], Robin Day, cigarette in one hand, cigar in the other, chomping at one and smoking the other, was always saying, 'Yes, but what about this? What about that?' Finding new aspects to a story. Our Newsnight team is wonderful, young, diverse – and we all sit down and hone stuff, shaping, making it exciting, finding last-minute guests."

We could probably talk breaking news for the whole hour. But she's willing to rattle gaily through her beginnings: growing up in Dumfries, choosing at 17 between university and drama school and so on. She read Scottish studies at Edinburgh, but harboured ambitions to become a journalist. A careers adviser in the 1970s wrongly told her that women only got into the BBC as secretaries but thankfully she was accepted on to its graduate scheme and her career roared ahead. By her early 20s she was toting a heavy recorder, splicing tape, learning on the job, becoming the first woman day editor on Reporting Scotland.

END OF AN ERA

I ask where the confidence came from, suspecting her of having a notably supportive father. “True! My father was a lawyer. He advised me not to be one, but I think his brain worked the way mine does: that kind of forensic way of operating. Mum was supportive in a different way. It’d be ‘you split an infinitive’ or ‘Kirsty, you shouldn’t wear linen, it’s very crumpled’. But I was lucky. I rode the wave of more and more women coming into the BBC.”

She came south to do radio, Breakfast Time and The Late Show, Glasgow remaining her home base. Then, “Tim Gardam, the editor of Newsnight, asked me to present. But I was pregnant and commuting, so I said no and thought that was that. But when James was born, in 1993 [Wark also has a daughter, Caitlin, with her television producer husband Alan Clements], Tim said, ‘Now come!’”

Why did Newsnight attract her? Late-night political, social and world affairs in depth with few concessions to showbiz, she says. Presenters are not there to be characters: it’s about homework, clarity, concentration, fearless questions and listening to the answers, flying solo and live. “I loved it for being capacious,” she says. “Room for politics, room for culture...” The axing of Newsnight Review in 2009 was “very sad”.

W E DISCUSS HIGH and low moments. She has a particular softness in talking about being at the village of Ballater, close to Balmoral, after the Queen died. “That day meant a lot to me. I’m not a person for emoting, and that kind of holding-back, the attitude of respect, of deference, in Scotland mattered... You don’t need to emote.”

She gives another example of the reporter’s need to feel, but not sentimentalise. In 2013, three women in Cleveland, Ohio, were released after being held captive by Ariel Castro for up to 11 years. “Stories like that are awful and wonderful. Amanda Berry had a baby from rape, then six years old – but in that concrete basement she drew for the child, showing her the outside world, the streets. It was humbling interviewing them: they said they had seen the royal wedding of William and Kate on television down there, but one said: ‘The dress was very disappointing, not a fairytale dress.’” She smiles. “I got a letter a week later from Prince William asking if he could write to the girls. That was great!”

But is she not emotionally battered by the news? Many are becoming “news avoiders” after the relentless misery of wars and climate > ◁ change. “You have to be empathetic but not show it. Find a tone, restrained, not cold, not interfering with the story.” But personally? Nightmares after Newsnight? “I don’t think so.” A pause. “But right now, babies! Horrifying. The futility! Shame on adults. Shame on them every day of the week we let children down. Yes, you could be very overwhelmed, but as a journalist you have to learn not to be.”

THE PERSONAL RISK of live interviews she merely relishes, having faced anger several times. An interview with former SNP leader Alex Salmond caused particular trouble. “It was about the way it finished. The grammar of television is that on the guest’s last answer they cut away from you so you can turn to another camera. So he’s speaking, and by mistake the director cuts to me going” – she demonstrates a fed-up eyebrow. “That was the trouble: perceived rudeness. The Nats complained.” At this point I mischievously ask her view on Scottish independence. “Impartial, BBC, no opinion... What’s so lovely about Scotland’s politics is the endless difficulty.”

Has she ever felt defeated? “Every interviewer does sometimes. But I’ll tell you the only broadcasting complaint I’ve ever had upheld against me. I interviewed Michael Portillo live, and he used an expression never used by women about men – he said, ‘Stop hectoring me!’ I can’t remember my exact words but I struck back, too much on the front foot. Complaints came in.

“My mistake wasn’t the interview, though: it was being at work that day. In quick succession my father had died, and my mother’s sister, to whom I was very close. I came back too quickly. I always say to people, if you’re ill or bereaved do not rush back.” She raps the table. “Do not take yourself so seriously that you are the only person who absolutely has to be there that minute. I should have taken two weeks off. The complaint was upheld, and I have no mitigating factor. No matter what you’re feeling, what the viewer sees counts. No excuse. My fault.”

Her distance from the modern culture of excuses makes me draw breath in admiration. What about the scrutiny of women on TV? Men

‘I love fashion.
But you need to look modern and unadorned’

get away with a suit and a comb-over, but women are under the microscope. Does she fret about looks and outfits? “No, though they did this playout of me 30 years ago and, goodness, it was shoulders-first, wasn’t it? Virtually a suit of armour. But less is more. I love fashion. I’m a tag hag, but need to look modern and unadorned. In the Thatcher interview I had a plain cream jacket. Less is more, though one of my favourite shirts – a Christopher Kane number, black with white beading – made someone say, ‘Eleven o’clock Newsnight, midnight at the rodeo!’ I never get offended.”

Still, the constant scrutiny broadcasters share with politicians gives her sympathy for both. “It’s hard to be constantly barraged. Laura Kuenssberg had a terrible time, and you can understand why women in politics sometimes think it’s not worth the candle.”

It’s clearly worth it for her, since she won’t leave Newsnight until after the next general election. “Whether May, October or... I’ll be pretty ped off if it’s January 2025, but I don’t think he’ll go that late. I like election nights, referendum nights, boogie nights, staying up! It’s fun, and without sounding portentous, you’re kind of witnessing history.”

I ask her prediction for Newsnight, whose audience has fallen and whose editor Stewart Maclean is also leaving. She is optimistic, or at least emphatically hopeful. “The live interviews are meat and drink, but its investigations are the core: they take a long time and feed stuff out to the rest of the BBC and the world.” She cites the Met police WhatsApp scandal, the exposure of bullying at Birmingham hospitals and Mark Urban’s report on the loss of an elite Russian tank regiment in Ukraine. “Digital is phenomenal, and there’s catch-up. I don’t think people realise what pressure the BBC is under financially but it’s that capacity to go deep that we can’t lose. Newsnight is one of its engines.”

ITS REPUTATION WAS seriously damaged, though, when a 2011 exposure of Jimmy Savile was suppressed by BBC management in favour of celebratory Christmas tributes. Did that hurt her, as a Newsnight loyalist? “Of course it was upsetting. It wasn’t Newsnight’s fault, but did the BBC do the best it can do? Sometimes that’s lacking. You’ve just got to hope that in time we catch these things.” She pauses, before adding with feeling: “What I cannot stand is bullying. Every organisation must look to its laurels about that. Everyone at every level must be able to come forward.” Has she been bullied? “Once. In Scotland. But three years later we met and she apologised. It was a woman. Maybe when there were only one or two of us around there may have been a slight concern about young women coming up behind...”

So the date of the next election will decide when her Newsnight reign ends. Also in the future is “the third novel. The last 20,000 words. I love it, having a different place to go to in your head. It’s set in Glasgow, 1890 to 1920.” Is her historical research strict, or does the journalist find it hard to make things up? “Sometimes. My editor says it’s allowed. War dates have to be right, but there’s a freedom...”

For today, though, she’s off to hard facts: the briefing in the office and then, once the daytime Persian Service vacates it, to fly the little spaceship of the Newsnight studio.

BIG SHOULDER PADS and bigger hair, a familiar soft-rock soundtrack, well-stocked bars in people's living rooms and an awful lot of brown furniture... There is much to enjoy about The Newsreader, the compelling Australian drama set in a Melbourne TV newsroom in the 1980s, which returns this week for a second series. And that's before you get to the duo at its heart: Helen Norville and Dale Jennings, co-anchors and sometime lovers.

For Anna Torv, previously best known for her role in the US hit Mindhunter and most recently seen in The Last of Us, the role of Helen was equally good to play. "It's one of those shows – they don't come along very often," she says on a Zoom call from her home on Australia's Gold Coast. "You either work on a show that's really fun, or one that you know is good, or that people like, but you seldom get the whole package."

What gives The Newsreader real narrative heft is the way in which the fictional characters' experiences are woven into real-life news stories from that decade; whether it's local tragedies like the Hoddle Street massacre, national headlines such as the overturning of Lindy Chamberlain's conviction for killing her baby (the "Dingo Trial"), or global events such as the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

For all of these, Helen and Dale are the station's faces on the news desk, putting aside their catalogue of personal demons to address the nation – and Torv reveals that even pretend-anchoring is a stressful exercise.

'Helen is berated and hated by her co-host, and nobody cares'

ANNA TORV

"Shooting the desk scenes was the very first thing we did," she remembers of the first season. "I'd practised the autocue and the newsreader voice. That was terrifying when we began, and I realised that you don't get to be on the desk unless you're a gun."

"There has to be an element of you, whether you're comfortable with it or not, that is capable of shoving a microphone in someone's face and asking a tough question. Even the ones who find it uncomfortable, they have to have a curiosity, an interest in people."

The Newsreader follows a rich tradition of television dramas about making television. Why are we so interested? Torv muses. "I don't think it's necessarily about TV, I think we're always intrigued by the mask. Any time you have the ability to really heighten the idea of a public persona versus someone's personal st. We all have the mask, we all wear it..."

Torv previously played a journalist investigating conspiracy in the political thriller The Secret

City, for which she spent time with real-life reporters. She is also closely related to arguably the world's most successful journalist – her aunt Anna (née Torv) was the second wife of Rupert Murdoch for 32 years, and a reporter herself back in the 1960s. While Torv demurs on the subject of her famous relatives, she is expansive on the subject of how mental-health problems were dealt with in the 1980s workplace, something pertinent to her character Helen, who we learn is keeping secret her past treatment for schizophrenia and depression.

"I spent a lot of time reading about that," she begins. "You have a woman who's referenced in the show as 'dramatic and larger than life' and she's having breakdowns, she's being berated, attacked by viewers, hated by her co-host, and nobody cares." Torv sounds as though she feels protective of Helen? "Of course. She's on her own, living in a little glasshouse and there is nobody – until Dale walks in the door."

IN SEASON ONE, Helen's first encounter with Dale, played by Sam Reid, heralds a meeting of minds that turns intensely romantic, their deep feelings for one another complicated by Dale's secret struggles with his sexuality.

"It's the idea that you can have that with people," says Torv. "Something that melds from friendship to sexuality to all kinds of stuff. That's the joy and heartache of these two characters. At the end of the day, what do they give each other? A safety net, a non-judgemental space to be with another person. It takes a while to figure out what that looks like." She pauses. "Helen and Dale are great together, and Sam and I just got each other."

Torv and Reid didn't know each other prior to filming, but their chemistry pops out of the screen. "I didn't meet him for any of the casting, but we just had the same sensibility. We'd get the giggles at the same thing, or we'd want to push it in the same direction. It morphed into an incredibly satisfying experience."

The show doesn't duck the casual sexism and homophobia that was part and parcel of any 1980s newsroom, and Torv is quick to say such things haven't completely disappeared.

"It's more covert these days, perhaps," she says. "Casual racism, too." She expresses her disappointment over her country's recent referendum result, which saw the defeat of a plan to alter the constitution and give Australia's Indigenous community a voice in parliament.

She sounds resigned: "It's not covert now."

She sounds far more proud when I mention the current string of female Australian actors triumphing on the world stage – Nicole Kidman, Cate Blanchett, Margot Robbie. Is there something in the water, perhaps?

"They're in a different stratosphere," she says humbly. "When Nicole hit it, nobody else had. She was our vanguard. I don't know if people give her enough credit for that. She was this Australian in these fantastic films, before it was easy [to do]."

THE ROAD TO NOW

BROADCAST NEWS

In season two of The Newsreader, Helen Norville (Anna Torv) and Dale Jennings (Sam Reid) find the newsroom of the late 80s more cut-throat than ever Torv – born in Melbourne and now 44 years old – moved overseas in her 20s, first to London, then to LA, before moving back to the Gold Coast a couple of years ago with her son, just as the pandemic took hold.

"It's family," she explains. "You want to go back to your roots. It comes with age and Covid had a huge amount to do with that. Where was I going to sit it out? This can become a chaotic life, you're always away working, you come home but you also want to see your family, and I was sick of straddling it."

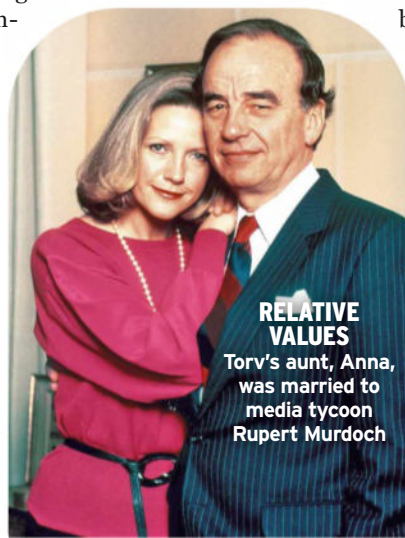

Freshly arrived home from work only 24 hours ago, Torv has already been out to dig her toes into the nearby sand. "Today was stunningly beautiful, and I did go for a swim. I'm really enjoying being home. We used to have to leave and be in major cities, but the world is changing."

Sure enough, her return has coincided with, not only growing appreciation for Australian talent overseas, but its home-grown television industry also enjoying a new wave. Torv, whose first significant role was on stage two decades ago, calls it "a sweet spot".

"One of the reasons I love working here is that you're all in it together and there's no hierarchy," she explains. "That stems from money, and the fact that it's not a billion-dollar business here. We still have that attitude. It's collaborative; you take it seriously, but not too seriously. Now we're taking it just that step further, where we're allowed to care."

"In the past, there's been a tendency to be inversely humble. I know when something's good and something's not, but it's all right to say, 'I really do care.' I've made a conscious effort in talking about The Newsreader to say, 'I'm really proud.'"

RELATIVE VALUES

Torv's aunt, Anna, was married to media tycoon Rupert Murdoch

PROFESSOR HANNAH FRY is a self-confessed workaholic. Which is why she's talking to me about the second series of The Secret Genius of Modern Life from a hotel room in Greece. Following a rollercoaster few years, the mathematician and presenter is on a much-needed holiday. So perhaps it's the wrong time to ask about the possible end of humanity.

But Fry wants us to sit up and take notice of the existential threat posed by artificial intelligence. "It's something we need to be concerned about," she says. "We can't sleepwalk into it, the stakes are too high. We're entering an era of technology we've never seen before... Exceptionally capable artificial intelligence is within reach and it's something we have to think about very seriously."

As a mathematician who studies patterns in human behaviour, thinking seriously is what Fry does, albeit with a hefty slice of wit when on-screen or on the airwaves (hosting Uncharted with Hannah Fry and The Curious Cases of Rutherford and Fry on Radio 4). She fell in love with maths as a child, when her Irish, stay-at-home mother made her complete a page of a text book every day during the summer holidays.

Born in Essex and growing up in Ware, Hertfordshire (her father made hydraulic lifts for lorries), she and her older sister were the first in the family to go to university. She has described her background as "very working class". Has she experienced any snobbery in TV or academia?

"Well, no, because I changed my accent. When I first got a show on Radio 4, I changed it a bit. My natural accent is very Essex, certainly when I was younger. When I started [at Radio 4] I would drop my t's. There were a few times when I was recording when the producer would say, 'Can we redo that one?' I realised she was trying to get me to pronounce my t's. So there's a period of time – and it slightly makes me cringe looking back – where I over-enunciated. Now I've relaxed a bit."

Would this happen today? We're meant to embrace a variety of accents, but Fry isn't certain that much has changed. "This isn't long ago, ten years, maximum," she says. "It depends on the accent. If you've got a lovely Geordie or Irish accent," they are celebrated, she suggests, "but there are some other accents that people slightly recoil from. I think the Essex accent, my natural accent, is one of them."

In The Secret Genius of Modern Life, Fry looks at the technology inside the objects around us, from chip-embedded passports to noise-cancelling headphones. She has a knack for bringing maths to the everyday, including even the business of romance. Her 2015 Ted Talk on the mathematics of love imparted data-fuelled nuggets on how to find the perfect partner online and know when you've found "the one".

"I was engaged when I wrote it, and it came out when I was on honeymoon," she laughs. "I'm now getting divorced, so the main thing to take from that is, don't listen to anything I say! Even the best techniques [only] work 37 per cent of the time. When I give the mathematically best approach, it doesn't mean that it's going to guarantee anything. So, manage your expectations."

Fry, who's also a writer and a professor in the mathematics of cities at UCL, met her "lovely new partner" on a dating app, where she continued to use her mathematical approach. She took him recently "to a BBC thing where he introduced himself to the presenter of Woman's Hour as my 'toy boy'." So he's younger? "Not that much!" She and her ex-husband, a sports writer, now live on the same street, co-parenting their children. "It's lovely. You can't exactly have a nice divorce, but as much as you possibly can, we've managed it. We're good friends. He comes over for Sunday lunch."

FRY IS RELAXED about her daughters' screen time. "Phones are so addictive because they appeal to our most basic desires. Kids want their parents' attention, interaction with other kids, space to run around, goofiness and fun. When I create an environment that taps into their most basic instincts, they don't care about the technology. I don't think there's anything inherently bad about iPads or technology. It's what you're giving them on the technology that counts."

What does she think of Rishi Sunak's plan to make students in England study some form of maths until they are 18? So many people leave school "feeling actively traumatised by what happened in maths classes... There's a shortage of maths teachers," she says,

A GOOD PLACE

"and PE teachers who are being forced to teach maths. Unless you start with who's going to teach it, and how it's going to be taught, you're exacerbating the existing maths trauma rather than solving the problem."

In January 2021, aged 36 and with daughters aged two and four, she was diagnosed with cervical cancer after a routine smear test, and had a hysterectomy. The workaholic that she is, Fry filmed a Horizon documentary on her diagnosis and treatment.

"It did bring me back to life," she says of making the film. "When you get cancer, if you're fortunate enough to come out the other side, as I was, it's like being slapped around the face. You're stung from the shock. But it's also sort of over. It's difficult to square those two things. When you have the diagnosis, everybody is really sympathetic and swarms around you but you're not in the right mental state to accept that help, you're reeling. Then when you get the all-clear, everyone goes away. And that makes sense."

"So I threw myself into work. But fortunately for me, I was working on a cancer film, so

'You can't exactly have a nice divorce, but we've managed it'

I spent hundreds of hours reading about cancer. I spent days talking with cancer patients, sitting with doctors. I came out the other side much stronger than I was before the cancer.

"If somebody said to me, 'Here's a button. If you press it, none of this would have happened,' I wouldn't press the button. If they said, 'You can rewind your life and never have had cancer', I wouldn't want to press it. I'm so much happier, I know who I am."

Judging from our Zoom meeting, that's a hopeful person. Perhaps that's why she believes that as long as we grapple with the issues, artificial intelligence could transform the world for good. "There's real potential, and I'm not exaggerating, for a utopian future," she says. "Think of something simple like taking salt out of water. We can do it, but it's energy-expensive. That's the perfect type of problem for AI to try and solve. If we get to the stage where it can crack just that one problem, then suddenly droughts become a thing of the past."

"If you wanted to, you could turn the Sahara Desert back into a rainforest. If you had infinite access to clean water, then suddenly climate change stops being [such] an issue... We just need more intelligence. There are very positive things that we can look forward to, we've just got to be careful that we do it in the safest way possible."

CENTURY QUIZ 1980s

From Live Aid to The Singing Detective, we test your knowledge of the late 80s

1 BBC SPORTS PERSONALITY OF THE YEAR 1984

It had been quite a year in sport, giving hosts

Desmond Lynam, Harry Carpenter and David Coleman much to comment upon in this live 30th-anniversary awards gala. More than 400 leading sport personalities gathered to relive memorable moments, including the gold medal wins for British athletes Tessa Sanderson, Sebastian Coe and Daley Thompson at the Los Angeles Olympic Games. The top three BBC sports personalities of the year were, in reverse order: snooker's Steve Davis, Coe and figure skaters Torvill and Dean. Torvill and Dean won gold in the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo for their routine to which piece of music by Ravel?
a Boléro b Gelato c Sorbet

2 LIVE AID 1985

Such was the impact of the shocking images in BBC journalist Michael Buerk's report from famine-stricken Ethiopia in 1984 that musicians Bob Geldorf and Midge Ure created Band Aid and the charity single Do They Know It's Christmas? This led to the huge benefit concert Live Aid on 13 July 1985, held simultaneously held at Wembley Stadium, London (to a crowd of 72,000) and John F Kennedy Stadium, Philadelphia (with 100,000 people). In the UK, BBC2 aired the first ten hours, with BBC1 covering the remaining six, both in mono, while Radio 1 played the whole concert in stereo. Worldwide it was watched by 1.9 billion and raised £100,247,450 for African famine relief.

Which British band were first to perform at the Live Aid concert on 13 July 1985 with their aptly titled Rockin' All over the World?
a The Boomtown Rats
b Status Quo c U2

3 THE ARCHERS 1985

Launched on New Year's Day 1951, BBC Radio's long-running serial reached its 20,000th episode in June 2023. One of the many peaks along its long country path was the much-anticipated wedding of Ambridge's Shula Archer (Judy Bennett) to solicitor Mark Hebden (Richard Derrington). As luck would have it, royal photographer Lord Lichfield was invited to the event by a family friend and his cover shot of Shula graced RT in 1985.

In which fictional English county is The Archers set?

a Borsetshire b Midsomer
c Trumptonshire

4 CHRISTMAS 1985

Instead of the traditional illustrated cover, the double issue featured those diamond geezers, the Trotters – Del Boy (David Jason), Uncle Albert (Buster Merryfield) and Rodney (Nicholas Lyndhurst). Their hit sitcom Only Fools and Horses was BBC1's Christmas-night highlight – a feature-length special that took them to Holland and attracted 16.9m viewers. Cushty!

What was the title of this adventurous episode?

a Diamonds Are for Heather
b Christmas Crackers
c To Hull and Back

5 EASTENDERS 1986

To celebrate the first anniversary and storming success of the BBC1 soap, RT photographer Don Smith went on set to capture the Queen Vic's original landlady Angie (Anita Dobson) and landlord Den Watts (Leslie Grantham). A 12-page pull-out souvenir included a review of the current plotlines such as the mystery of who fathered Michelle Fowler's baby. Also featured were celebrity fans, among them Paul McCartney, Samantha Fox and David Jason, who joked: "I can just see Del Boy in Albert Square, knowing the people. Even though it's the wrong side of the river, he'd knock out a few watches. Del Boy would turn over anybody."

When EastEnders began, the two main families, connected by matriarch Lou, were the Fowlers and which other?

a The Beales b The Mitchells

6 THE SINGING DETECTIVE 1986

Dennis Potter's highly original, multi-layered drama serial starred Michael Gambon as Philip Marlow, a writer of detective pulp fiction. Hospitalised by psoriasis, he delves through a series of hallucinations into a complex world where he becomes the protagonist in his own detective story. "One of the things I want to do in The Singing Detective is break up the narrative tyranny," Potter told RT. The result divided opinion at the time but it has since been hailed a classic and, in 2000, it ranked 20th in the British Film Institute's 100 Greatest British Television Programmes.

In 1992, Michael Gambon began playing which pipe-smoking detective on ITV?

a Hercule Poirot b Jules Maigret
c Jacques Clouseau

7 CHRISTMAS 1988

It's panto time! Oh yes, it is! Adorned by Lynda Gray's beautifully illustrated cover, this festive issue of Radio Times gained a Guinness World Record as the biggest-selling edition of any magazine in British history with an astonishing 11,220,666 copies sold. Inside, RT presented a panto-themed photoshoot featuring the big comedy stars of the day, from Ronnie Corbett, Bob Monkhouse and Tony Robinson to Dawn French and Jennifer Saunders.

Les Dennis introduced RT's 1988 Christmas shoot dressed as Simple Simon, who is a character in which panto?

a Jack and the Beanstalk
b Aladdin c Mother Goose

8 BARRY NORMAN 1989

Revered film critic for the BBC and RT, Barry Norman mounted his hobby horse to lament the demise of the western as a cinema genre. Spurred on by Paradise, a new series on BBC1, he was pleased that America was again making TV westerns. Brought up on cowboy movies, he wrote: "At its best it was a morality tale, the clash of good versus evil, and good always triumphant. Never mind that life is not like that: life should be like that." According to Barry Norman, which 1950s classic was the best western ever made?
a High Noon b The Searchers
c Calamity Jane

9 AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 DAYS 1989

Every journey begins with a single step and Michael Palin began his world travelogues for the BBC by following in the footsteps of Phileas Fogg from Jules Verne's novel, and circumnavigating the world in 80 days by land, sea and balloon. In the final episode, watched by 12 million, Michael made it back to London within the time – to be precise, in 79 days and seven hours. Michael Palin wasn't the BBC's first choice for this mission. Which seasoned traveller was?
a Alan Whicker b Noel Edmonds
c Clive James

Questions by Mark McCaighey

Why this NEW meal plan is revolutionising mealtimes for dogs

Personalise your dog's food with our nutritionally complete raw meal plan from only £1.07* a day

The facts are clear: Eating too much processed food for too long is a recipe for health troubles.

As humans, we're all well aware of how important a balanced diet of suitable protein, fresh fruits and veggies is for us. But what about our four-legged friends?

Dogs need a balanced diet just as much as we do to keep them fit, healthy and looking their best.

Still feeding your dog dry?

You're certainly not alone – a huge amount of pet owners serve their dog's conventional kibble daily, and it's very easy to understand why.

It's readily available at nearly every local supermarket or corner shop. Storage and serving are hassle-free, plus it's budget-friendly, and many dogs devour it without a second thought.

But is it a win-win? Unfortunately, the reality isn't quite so rosy. Most conventional dry dog foods are loaded with grains that create a false sense of fullness while concealing unnatural preservatives and colourants. These additives can impact your dog's digestion, metabolism, and even their breath.

And no wonder – dogs haven't evolved to eat food with a long shelf life. In the wild, their ancestors hunted prey and foraged for fruit and vegetables to get all the necessary nutrients. Meaning their biological makeup is designed to thrive on raw, natural food.

Why go raw?

Firstly, raw food is gentle on your dog's tummy and aids their digestion naturally. Plus, it means less mess to clean up in the garden or out and about with firm, manageable stools. And as a bonus, the proper nutrients in raw food give your furry friend a shiny, healthy coat – so expect lots of compliments.

Is all raw the same?

Far from it, crafting a meticulously balanced diet tailored to your dog's needs can take time and effort. Especially when you add sensitive dietary requirements into the mix, together with portion control and impeccable hygiene routines, most raw diets can become very tricky.

The result? Many owners give up feeding their dogs raw because it's too messy, time-consuming, and a nutritional balancing act. But it doesn't have to be this way!

Raw, made convenient

At Natures Menu, we've been setting the gold standard from our Norfolk home for over four decades. We're all about maintaining the highest standards for creating, packing, and delivering raw pet food.

Our promise is simple – raw and natural ingredients that are easy to see, understand, and trust, with absolutely no artificial colourings, flavours, or preservatives.

And now, the ultimate convenience of raw food can be delivered straight to your doorstep through our NEW personalised meal plans. These aren't just your average dog meals; they are perfectly balanced, expertly crafted, and rigorously approved.

All we need from you are just a few details about your furry companion, stuff like their weight, age, and how active they are.

You can then tailor the plan to match your dog's tastes and specific dietary, intolerance or allergy needs.

Better still, our meal plans are frozen to preserve the freshness, flavour, and nutrients at the source. Plus, they're much easier to handle, so no worrying about mess, complicated prep, and portion sizes. All you need to do is pour, thaw, and serve!

FOOTBALL'S HEART AND SOUL

Don't miss South America's finest at their very best, says Simon Barnes

HERE'S AN IMPORTANT sporting truth: "Cricket is an Indian game accidentally invented by the British." Social theorist Ashis Nandy said that back in 1989, and its essence can apply to other sports. For example, football is a South American game that was also accidentally invented by the British.

Nearly everyone plays football or watches football, and it's the national game of almost every nation on Earth. But the heart and soul of football, along with the brains and, of course, the feet, are all in South America – and have been there for the past 75 years.

We tend to see South American football in the players at top European clubs, such as Barcelona legend Lionel Messi of Argentina or Real 'Victory in la Copa defines careers and shapes lives'

Madrid's Brazilian talisman Vinícius Júnior. Of course, we think of the national teams, too, as Brazil have won the World Cup five times and Argentina three, including the most recent one.

But we don't often see South American club football at its trenchant, uncompromising, skilful and occasionally brutal best. On Saturday we have a rare opportunity to do so when BBC3 broadcasts the final of the Copa Libertadores. Literally translated as the "Liberators' Cup", it has been celebrating South America's freedom from colonialist Spanish rule since 1960.

It's the South American equivalent of Europe's Champions League and results in the competition have at least as much significance. For players and coaches, victory in la Copa defines careers and shapes lives.

Once again, a team from Argentina takes on one from Brazil. Buenos Aires's Boca Juniors are the former, and their old boys include Diego Maradona, Juan Román Riquelme and Carlos Tevez. Boca have won la Copa six times, but not since 2007, and the fans and club pride themselves on their working-class credentials. When they were given the derogatory nickname of los Bosteros – meaning the manure-shifters, translated politely – a sense of perverse pride meant they adopted it.

SIX-TIME WINNERS

Lining up against them is Rio de Janeiro's Fluminense, whose old boys include Carlos Alberto, Romário, Thiago Silva and Didi. They've never won la Copa and have been runners-up just once. But Flu (as they're known in Brazil) do hold the record for the highest attendance at a football match – in 1963 a match against local rivals Flamengo at the Maracanã stadium pulled in 194,000 spectators. Coincidentally, Saturday's final will also be at the Maracanã, meaning the Brazilians will be on home turf.

In Britain we tend to get sentimental about South American football, especially if it's Brazilian. We have the fantasy that it's all about playful skills learnt on Copacabana beach. Brazil has a population of 200 million – it's a big beach, but not that big. In both Brazil and Argentina there are levels of poverty incomprehensible to most Europeans. Their football reflects that, because it's both tough and appreciative of style and skill.

These days many of the best South

American players are tacklers and passers, rather than masters of exhibition football. Take midfielder André Trindade of Fluminense, who breaks down opposition moves decisively and then fires the pass that opens up the counter. Several European clubs are after him. Reports say Liverpool are front-runners, but Arsenal are making an impressive blind-side run. Look out for Boca's Luca Langoni, too. The days of will-o'-the-wisp wingers are gone, as Langoni has speed and skill, but also startling core strength. Tacklers seem to just bounce off him.

WE ARE PRIVILEGED, then, to be guests at a great occasion. Who to cheer for? Perhaps it comes down to your choice of shirt design – Boca's is blue with a yellow hoop, while Fluminense have a "tricolor" of vertical stripes of red, green and white.

Since the Premier League began, it can be easy to take footballing flair for granted. But the Copa Libertadores final will show us that the Premier League plays South American football. Why not? It's their game.

The streets of Dallas packed out for the president's visit

Intriguing first-hand accounts and expertly restored footage await in JFK: One Day in America, new and exclusive to the National Geographic channel

Whether you were alive at the time or not, some images of Dallas on 22 November 1963 are bound to be etched into your mind. The black Lincoln Continental gleaming in the Texas sunshine, the First Lady's iconic pink Chanel suit, President Kennedy waving at adoring, flag-waving crowds; and then complete panic, terror and confusion.

Now, the National Geographic channel is bringing you closer than ever to those shocking events with a compelling new documentary, JFK: One Day in America. With three episodes broadcast over two consecutive evenings, it's an unmissable – and remarkably detailed and emotive – retelling of one of history's most famous assassinations.

Real-life cinema

With first-class production values that elevate it to the look and feel of a feature film, JFK: One Day

President Kennedy meets supporters just hours before his death in America feels much richer than your average documentary. Indeed, it's been produced by the acclaimed UK-based 72 Films, and is the second in the series after the Emmy Award-winning 9/11: One Day in America. Like its predecessor, it deftly brings home the significance of a seismic moment in America's history.

Those who were there

This documentary comes without a scripted narration, leaving first-hand eyewitnesses to tell the story faithfully in their own words without the need for artificial drama. From members of the Secret Service to an acquaintance of the assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, there is an incredible level of access to contributors – and given the event occurred 60 years ago, it could be the last chance ever to hear such accounts.

Unsurprisingly, it's clear the years haven't dulled the emotional impact that day took on many who lived it, and their presence in the documentary only makes you feel the sense of loss and fear of the time more keenly.

A nation stunned

Lyndon B Johnson is immediately sworn in as president on Air Force One

A story in full colour

In collaboration with the Sixth Floor Museum at Dealey Plaza in Dallas, the National Geographic channel has been authorised to colourise black and white archive news footage for the first time. From video documenting JFK's home life to footage from the day of the assassination, the programme breathes new life into images from an era when the world's most significant political and historical moments first began playing out on television for the world to see.

It's a fitting treatment for a figure whose election and tragically brief administration ushered in what some historical commentators call the birth of the modern presidency, and whose legacy continues to generate much intrigue.

ROONEY TUNES

Coleen Rooney's lengthy retelling of the bizarre "Wagatha Christie" trial is irresistibly over the top

A WOMAN SWEEPS through some gates and along a never-ending drive, before swishing onto the forecourt and climbing the steps of her country pile. No, it's not a Jane Austen heroine, but the 2023 equivalent: a Wag opening her home and heart to a camera crew.

Just when we're still recovering from Victoria Beckham's careful non-admission of the pain caused by David's "lonely in Madrid" era, here's Coleen Rooney, wife of Wayne. In three painstakingly detailed hours she takes us on a journey from when she first suspected somebody was leaking stories from her "private Instagram" – surely an oxymoron? – through to the day she emerged triumphant from London's High Court. As she vanquished Rebekah Vardy (her rival

My favourite part is Coleen's friend Danielle recounting how the Wagatha tweets went viral while she was having her eyelashes done in a friend's garage. "I heard this gasp and I couldn't open my eyes." Thus three hours whizzes by, both intensely dramatic and profoundly inconsequential, making for perfect entertainment.

It does make me fear, though, that another nail is being tapped into the coffin of TV soaps. For years, we've had similar fodder to this Wag war served up by reality TV's The Real Housewives of Cheshire, the revellers of Geordie Shore and the Rolex-wearers of Essex, with some perceived social snub leading to an almighty two-season fall-out, even though I'd struggle to name a single character.

Now with A-listers ready to come to the same table and promising the inside track on stories we're already deeply invested in, reality TV is putting its tanks firmly on the soaps' lawn. Who needs another teen pregnancy when we have Wagatha? Or Danielle's eyelashes?

NEW CAGNEY AND LACEY?

With the ending of Endeavour, there is no more satisfying home-baked police procedural than Shetland, but I have heard of a friend's mother who refuses to tune in for the new series, now that Dougie

COURTROOM DRAMA

Coleen Rooney (pictured) was sued for libel by Rebekah Vardy in 2022

'I fear another nail is being tapped into the coffin of TV soaps'

Wag married to Jamie Vardy, and here endeth my football knowledge) it was a battle for hearts, minds and reputations.

This story has everything any Austen enthusiast would want: an errant husband, a maligned ex (poor Peter Andre!), plus a potentially incriminating phone that ended up at the bottom of the sea. The events are familiar due to a rainforest-depleting amount of newspaper coverage during the 2022 trial, but it's refreshing to have the down-to-earth Coleen's take. And she proves to be a very helpful TV heroine, recounting the stories she invented to catch the culprit, taking us to the coffee shop where she pressed "send" on the tweet that set the whole Wagatha Christie juggernaut in motion, and even, bizarrely, re-enacting her time testifying in the dock.

Henshall's dishy DI Jimmy Perez has packed his pea coat and made a dash for the mainland. There's always a collective audience gulp when our favourite lead departs, but – and I write as a committed fan of the show – I have high hopes.

I wondered how the arrival of DI Ruth Calder, played crisply by Ashley Jensen, would go down with the locals on and off screen, plus fans who felt Tosh should have been given the big badge.

But instead of the tired trope of women competing, we have two strong female leads in Jensen and Alison O'Donnell, who clash, collaborate and have great chemistry. One has a happy home life, while the other is a singleton open to encounters.

One's even blonde while the other's brunette. It's basically Cagney and Lacey of Lerwick – and I have no higher praise.

Coleen Rooney: The Real Wagatha Story is available on Disney+; Shetland continues Wednesday 9pm BBC1 and on iPlayer

007: Road to a Million

Episode 1 available Friday

The producers of the James Bond films are behind this curious quiz/challenge show that takes pairs of contestants to various 007-worthy global locations and asks them – via Brian Cox as the Controller, a malevolent, all-seeing quizmaster – multiple-choice general knowledge questions for cash. The difficult bit comes before that: a treasure hunt to find each question might involve a seven-hour trek across the Highlands, or breaking into an abandoned Venetian villa. Imagine Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? crossed with a more extreme Race across the World and you're basically there. If you can dispel the suspicion that the crew must have been offering constant hints off-camera to stop the whole thing collapsing, it's a grand adventure. JACK SEALE

WESTERN

Butcher's Crossing

★★★ TV Available now

Nicolas Cage heads the cast of this rugged western as part of a posse searching for a mythical herd of buffalo in the Colorado wilderness of the 1870s. Documentary maker Gabe Polsky's feature debut stays faithful to John Edward Williams's 1960 novel of the same name, and the film aptly evokes the harsh realities of the terrain and the toll it can take on an adventurer's sanity. While Polsky's attempts to deconstruct Old West mythologies sometimes cause events to meander, Cage's enigmatic performance is engaging throughout. TERRY STAUNTON

CRIME DRAMA

Culprits

All 8 eps available Wednesday

J Blakeson, who directed the film I Care a Lot and the memorably unpleasant BBC series Gunpowder, is on writing and directing duties for a vibrant heist/revenge thriller. It takes the familiar story of a gang of disparate ordinary people who somehow end up orchestrating a heist together, and flips it: our gang here appear to be regular folk, but they used to be expert thieves. Evidently they made some enemies because someone is now trying to kill them, so together they must decide: fight or run? The action is slick and the ensemble – including Gemma Arterton, Nathan Stewart-Jarrett, Kirby Howell-Baptiste and Niamh Algar – is a strong mix. JS

FAMILY

The Santa Clauses

Series 1 available now; series 2 eps 1 and 2 available Wednesday

It's coming... a jolly, silly, festive family comedy – spinning off from the 1994 movie – returns for a second series, with Tim Allen as the ordinary guy who has taken over the role of Santa Claus. Last time out he experimented with passing the baton to a different ordinary guy, but now he's back at the helm and plans a succession process that will keep magical global gift-giving in the family. While his teenaged son struggles with the relevant training, a curve ball arrives in the shape of Modern Family star Eric Stonestreet as... the real Santa? Surely not? JS

World War II: Secrets from Above

All 6 eps available from Wednesday

First shown on National Geographic last year, this documentary series literally finds new angles on the Second World War and its most famous battles, with aerial reconnaissance taken afresh and from vintage photography to pinpoint exactly what happened where. As the programme also looks at the aftermath of the conflict, showing what was destroyed and how it was rebuilt, its signature trick is to morph its visuals between the present and the past. What has survived is often just as striking as what has changed. JS

SERIES FINALE

As the first of Marvel's TV spin-offs to get a series two, Loki could be seen as a bit of an experiment for the superhero studio. But has it been successful? Well, like the flashy scientific demonstrations of a certain Victor Timely, it's definitely looked the part, even if it hasn't worked perfectly. Although the cast is firing on all cylinders, increasingly complicated sci-fi plots have made the story hard to connect with, or even understand on a basic level. Hopefully in this final episode, all becomes clear. HUW FULLERTON

Yellow Door: '90s Lo-fi Film Club

★★★ Available now

This charming documentary looks at the Yellow Door Film Institute, a cinema club formed in South Korea in the mid 90s. Future Oscar-winner Bong Joon-ho (Parasite) was among the movie geeks who regularly met to dissect everything from Citizen Kane to A Clockwork Orange. Director Lee Hyuk-rae reunites this “band of social misfits” to reminisce about days spent analysing The Godfather or cataloguing VHS tapes. It's niche, but the group's passion is infectious.

Nyad ★★★ 15

Available from 3 November

Annette Bening stars as athlete Diana Nyad in this crowd-pleasing biopic, which focuses on her 2010 attempt to swim 110 miles from Cuba to Florida – a feat that she failed during her 1970s heyday. Directors Elizabeth Chai Vasarhelyi and Jimmy Chin (Free Solo) ably convey the toll of Nyad's efforts as she confronts numerous obstacles, including sharks, storms and deadly jellyfish. Though the drama is sometimes clunky, the film shines in the scenes between Bening and Jodie Foster, who is magnetic as Nyad's long-suffering friend and coach. MOLLY MOSS

DRAMA

Pain Hustlers ★★★ Available now

Adapted from Evan Hughes's investigative book, this slick drama follows mother-of-one Liza Drake (Emily Blunt) as she finds work in pharmaceuticals. Initially, it's a rags-to-riches tale, as Liza meets Chris Evans's salesman and lands a job with his employers, but the film grows more serious as it dives into how reps lined their pockets while pushing addictive opioids. Director David Yates rarely lifts events beyond functional, but Blunt adds gusto and there's good support from Catherine O'Hara as her mother. JM

DOCUMENTARY

Robbie Williams Available from Wednesday

After the success of Beckham, Netflix has another revealing documentary about a top 1990s heart-throb. This one is more of a raw, first-person confessional affair, as Robbie Williams's bracing honesty about his mental health and how it was affected by fame forms a commentary on a collection of archive clips that remind us of what an extraordinary life he had as a young man. We've not seen anything quite like the mania around Take That since they split up, but if anything Williams became an even bigger star as a solo artist. Here, he talks frankly about what he feels that took from him. JACK SEALE

Episodes 1-3 available Wednesday

This drama is based on a novel by Edith Wharton, author of The Age of Innocence and The House of Mirth – but Wharton's last book was unfinished when she died in 1937, which means liberties can be taken... The story of American debutantes disrupting the social scene in 1870s London emerges at first as a frothy affair, but it's not quite as light as it seems in the opening, which plays like a cross between Bridgerton and a 1980s pop video. Kristine Froseth leads the wild young things as Nan, with Christina Hendricks, Fenella Woolgar and Amelia Bullmore playing tutting, scheming grown-ups. JS

Lessons in Chemistry

Episode 6 available from Friday

Yet another perfectly constructed episode sees Elizabeth Zott (Brie Larson) living her dream as a successful television chef, whose risky decision to take live questions from the studio audience leads to a beautiful exchange with a thwarted housewife. And as for our heroine's battle with the malign station manager (a fantastically villainous Rainn Wilson), there can only be one winner. But we also get shocking new information about the desperate sadness in Elizabeth's past – and some awful brutality in the early-1960s present. It's rounded, filigree drama. JS

DRAMA

For All Mankind

Episode 1 available from Friday

You can see the intelligence of this alternate-history drama as it once again pitches us forward in time: the montage that spools us from the mid-1990s to 2003, when the new episodes are set, mixes familiar reality with character development and pointed changes to known history – Al Gore becomes President, for example. Mining asteroids for valuable minerals is the new goal of the cosmic explorers, but an ailing, ageing Ed (Joel Kinnaman) finds himself on a mission that is fraught with danger. Toby Kebbell joins the cast as a man who hopes Mars is the solution to his problems. JS

SERIES FINALE

This prestige drama about a US TV news company is so much stronger when it sidelines a rather inert performance by Jennifer Aniston as presenter Alex Levy. Sadly, she plays a key part in this series finale revolving around a takeover attempt from dastardly billionaire Paul Marks (Jon Hamm) that would probably end the fictional show within the show. As usual, however, Reese Witherspoon and Billy Crudup are excellent in their supporting roles. JS

This never happens: at the start of October, ITVX casually added to its catalogue all six episodes of this 1969 sketch show written by Michael Palin and Terry Jones (and featuring Colin Gordon as the narrator, below centre). It took Monty Python aficionados by surprise, and not just in the sense that they didn't know it was coming to ITVX – until the streaming box set appeared, four out of the six episodes made hadn't been seen for decades and were thought to be lost. Palin thinks it's patchy and Jones said he was frustrated by the pair's lack of creative control, but it's an incredible find and a fascinating piece of TV comedy history. JS

With its plinky-plonky piano theme and classical allegories, Harry Wild is usually as safe and sedate as crime dramas come. But in this season finale, we see body parts chucked from a car window. As tonal shifts go, it's a bold one. Once reassembled, the limbs turn out to have once belonged to the owner of a boxing gym – not, you'd think, a natural environment for Harry. But one pair of spectacles later and she's heading undercover as a sports psychologist. DAVID BROWN

A furious docudrama takes us back to the height of Covid lockdown in 2020 and 2021, when the young staff of Boris Johnson's Downing Street staff enjoyed boozy bashes while the rest of Britain dutifully observed social distancing, even when that came at a huge emotional cost. The dramatisations of the parties occasionally seem too extreme to be believable, until we're reminded that they're all based on the reporting of investigative journalists and the findings of Sue Gray's enquiry. The result is truly enraging. JACK SEALE

Available until 15 November

The life and legacy of Richard Penniman – aka rock 'n' roll trailblazer Little Richard – are thoroughly assessed in this incisive documentary. Director Lisa Cortes explores Richard's tough upbringing in Macon, Georgia, then shows how his persona evolved into something wholly unique. In this standalone sequel to the 2018 cyber-thriller Searching, a teenager investigates online when her mother and new boyfriend fail to return home from a holiday in Colombia. Like its predecessor, which starred John Cho as an amateur sleuth, this film's story unfolds entirely through its protagonist's computer screen. Beatles Night from 8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Beatlemania hit Sky Arts a few weeks ago, when the channel ran four Fabs-related programmes linked to the group's first big TV appearance. Now the idea has ferried across to the Beeb, only this time it's tied in with a more topical theme.

From Stuart Sutcliffe to George Martin, there have been numerous claims to the "fifth Beatle" crown. But now the band does have a new member of sorts, with an AI reviving a John Lennon vocal from an old demo tape. Would Lennon have cocked a sardonic sneer at this idea, or is it akin to the experimentation he embraced on tracks like Tomorrow Never Knows and Revolution 9?

Alas, it's not looking like such conjecture will be tackled on tonight's archive compilations, The Beatles and the BBC (8.30pm) or Sounds of Liverpool at the BBC (9.35pm), so see our cover feature for that. Or maybe just... imagine.

"Remember, remember the 5th of November/Gunpowder, treason and plot" the song goes. But most of us only recall the basic story of the 1605 scheme by Catholic rebels Robert Catesby, Thomas Percy and Guy Fawkes to kill the king by blowing up the House of Lords.

Xand van Tulleken and Tracy Borman put it into historical context before giving a dramatic, almost day-by-day account of the conspiracy: the initial plans, the delay, the legal renting of a cellar beneath the Houses of Parliament to store the gunpowder, the torture Fawkes endured before being executed... plus several twists in the tale. JANE RACKHAM

Strictly is one big family. We know this because at least one celebrity or professional tells us every week. Families do fall out, yet funnily enough it's something no-one seems to dwell on here. Or even speak about, for that matter, despite it being a recent hot topic in the press.

Hard to believe now, but there was a time when training-room bickering would be aired. It gave a rounded and honest picture of the ups and downs of being in a partnership. Those pre-dance VTs then morphed into irritating skits that paint a shiny veneer across everything. Tonight, the remaining couples perform again and, regardless of what could be going on behind the scenes, there will of course be big smiles all round.

The 2012 Hollow Crown series set the bar high but this return, first shown in 2016, matched it. The three parts of Shakespeare's original Henry VI are spliced into two films, with no end of clever liberties taken, so that, for instance, the first words we hear are lifted from another play entirely, Troilus and Cressida.

We're tossed into a raw, Game-of-Thrones-y world, with King Henry still a teenager, out of his depth. Sparring nobles are played by a fabulous cast: Adrian Dunbar as growling hothead York; Hugh Bonneville as elder statesman Gloucester; and best of all, Ben Miles as smouldering malcontent Somerset, more or less stealing the show. DAVID BUTCHER

JFK: 24 Hours That Changed the World

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

It's 60 years since President Kennedy's motorcade drove through Dallas's Dealey Plaza and someone (or several people, according to conspiracy theories) fired a fatal shot. A momentous historical event, his assassination has fascinated us ever since. Several programmes are marking the anniversary, starting with this documentary charting the events of 22 November 1963 by using recollections and archive footage set against music from the era. Central to it, of course, is the home movie filmed by Abraham Zapruder, which captured Kennedy's last moments.

Kennedy, Sinatra and the Mafia follows at 9pm, a thorough yet snappy study of the ties between the glamorous singer and equally glamorous president. A murky tale of philandering, deceit and political plotting, it highlights their dangerous links to organised crime. JR

FILM OF THE DAY

Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban

ADVENTURE The franchise holders took a risk by handing this third film to the little-known Mexican director Alfonso Cuarón (who has since won Oscars for Gravity and Roma). But the decision paid off. Cuarón brings a darker, edgier feel to the instalment, as Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) deals with escaped con Sirius Black (Gary Oldman), and the difficulties of becoming a teenager. There's still plenty of fun, too, with ghosts, ghouls and gizmos galore, and David Thewlis, Emma Thompson and Timothy Spall join the list of Brit stalwarts. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US/UK 2004, edited for content, HD)

LEMONY SNICKET'S A SERIES OF UNFORTUNATE EVENTS

ADVENTURE Unfolding like a Tim Burton take on a Grimm fairy tale, this eye-catching movie stars Jim Carrey as the evil Count Olaf, an actor and master of disguise who's out to swindle three orphaned siblings out of their fortune. Carrey is more silly than sinister, but the youngsters (including Emily Browning as the eldest heir) are fabulous, as are the film's quirky stylings. SLOAN FREER (US/Ger 2004, HD)

Leap Year

ROMCOM Ultra-organised Amy Adams rushes from Boston to Ireland to propose to her beau (Adam Scott) on 29 February, only to become stranded in Dingle. She meets cab driver Matthew Goode, and sparks fly. This frothy movie has enough blarney to charm, while Adams is enchanting in her role. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US/Jpn 2010, some swearing, HD)

LOVER COME BACK

ROMCOM This dig at the advertising world sees Doris Day reunited with her Pillow

Talk co-star Rock Hudson. It's very much of its period, but the idea of Madison Avenue exes marketing a nonexistent product remains a good one, and the anti-advertising jokes still work. The script was Oscar-nominated, though the finale is astoundingly tasteless. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961, HD)

THE DAY THE EARTH STOOD STILL

SCI-FI In an era of Cold War paranoia, director Robert Wise's film was a sign of hope, as a spaceship and its pilot (Michael Rennie) bring a message of peace rather than destruction. From Bernard Herrmann's otherworldly score to the film's deceptively simple designs, this movie had an incalculable influence on big-screen sci-fi. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1951, BW)

Blades of Glory

COMEDY Will Ferrell leads this enjoyable if trite sports-movie spoof, playing an ice skating bad boy who, along with his nemesis (Jon Heder) is banned after a brawl. There's a clever mix of skating action and spectacular effects-based moves, and fine support from Amy Poehler and Will Arnett as their camp opponents. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2007, edited for content, HD)

Ride Along

ACTION COMEDY Kevin Hart plays a wannabe detective who also wants to marry Tika Sumpter. Her hardcase cop brother (Ice Cube) won't give his blessing until Hart has accompanied him on a nightmare shift to hunt down vicious Laurence Fishburne. If you're looking for some undemanding action, this might be the place. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

A Kiss before Dying

CRIME This fine adaptation of author Ira Levin's dark tale is about a social climber who kills his wealthy girlfriend when her pregnancy threatens her inheritance. It stars a cast-against-type Robert Wagner, who relishes his role as the villain. A young Joanne Woodward plays the victim and a superb Mary Astor is Wagner's mother. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1956, violence)

Escape Room: Tournament of Champions

See review p105. (US 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

Let Him Go

THRILLER Grandparents Diane Lane and Kevin Costner worry about their infant grandson when he is whisked off to a new rural home. They decide to intervene but come up against the boy's new family, including cunning matriarch Lesley Manville. It's a masterclass in slow-burn tension from writer/director Thomas Bezucha. JOSH WINNING (US 2020, violence, HD)

NATURE

Liz Bonnin's Wild Caribbean

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

This new four-part series is something of a passion project for Liz Bonnin.

The presenter spent time in Trinidad as a child, and the island's vibrant environment inspired her to explore nature, shaping her career.

The Caribbean might be known as a dream holiday destination, but there's more to it than palm-fringed sands and turquoise seas. Made up of more than 7,000 islands and covering a million square miles, it plays host to a wide array of wildlife.

Bonnin's journey begins in the Greater Antilles, where humans are forging inspiring new relationships with the creatures that inhabit this wild terrain. In the Dominican Republic, she helps locals scale a 60ft palm tree to rescue a hawk chick at risk. In Haiti's forests, she seeks the elusive solenodon, a bizarre mole-like mammal that outlived the dinosaurs. She also monitors crocodile eggs, tracks down tarantulas and liberates flamingos from 20 years of captivity, witnessing their emotional flight to freedom. It's a holiday for the eyes and Bonnin makes for a highly engaging guide. MICHAEL HOGAN

Planet Earth III

6.15pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

If you want the raw, primal drama of red-clawed nature, this series may not be right for you. There is a great sequence tonight of a leopard ambushing an antelope from a tree, but for the most part the pleasures are more subtle.

The opening drone shot flying through a desert oasis in Chad is stunning, for instance, and there are several other glowing landscape images that you could happily frame and hang on a wall. A montage of dust storms is impressive in an unnerving way, and Saiga antelopes, we discover, have terrifically daft noses. But the star of the show must be the lovely maned wolf in Brazil, tending her pups in their den – a sight never caught on film until now. DAVID BUTCHER

Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream

6.15pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

All-singing, all-dancing TV talent shows have fallen out of favour lately. The X Factor has been put out to pasture, Britain's Got Talent is on the wane and the format of The Voice UK (which returned last night; see page 38) doesn't really encourage you to connect with the hopefuls in the way such a series should.

Refreshingly, with Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream, not only do you care who leaves, but the other contestants and experts do, too. Tonight, the boys bidding to play Sky face an acting workshop and sing solo. The margin for error is tiny, and the debate about who's going to leave is impassioned. When someone's sent packing, there are audible gasps and tears from all – even the judges. FRANCES TAYLOR

Three Little Birds

8.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

There's no dramatic incident here to match the riot we witnessed last week, but there remains an atmosphere of unease, particularly when it comes to the events in Borehamwood, as it's here that Chantrelle's employer, the predatory Mr Wantage, is removing her bedroom door – a move that leaves her feeling vulnerable and him with easy access.

There's a nagging sense that we're building towards a showdown in Dudley, too, as Leah embarks on a romance with Shelton, her colleague at the factory. Flashback scenes from Jamaica have already revealed that she's a survivor of domestic abuse, but Shelton is unaware both of Leah's husband and the fact that she has three children. DAVID BROWN

Time

9.00pm BBC1

Full series available on iPlayer

Not every scene in Time can be charged with tension, and nor should they be, yet it feels like something is missing from this second stretch of Jimmy McGovern's prison drama. It's good – of course, it's good – but it lacks the zing and jeopardy of series one. It feels unfair to compare the two, but I can't help doing so, time and time again.

That said, the final five minutes of tonight's episode will make you sit up straight as Orla (Jodie Whittaker), Abi (Tamara Lawrance) and Kelsey (Bella Ramsey) face the tough realities of an understaffed and underfunded prison service, while one particularly affecting scene sees fellow inmate Donna (Kayle Meikle) open up about her past. FT

Six Four

9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

"There's something weird going on," copper Chris O'Neill (Kevin McKidd) mutters. Too true, although at least we have been given a few clues as to exactly what. We now know what Sarah/Michelle (Vinette Robinson) is doing in London, that Six Four is a person (identity still unknown) and that, for some reason, there has been a massive police cover-up over the Julie Mackie case. Even so, nothing will prepare you for the surprise waiting for O'Neill when he returns to the marital home.

Elsewhere, Annabel Wallace (Iona Anderson), the justice minister's daughter, is still being kept prisoner by Jim Mackie (James Cosmo), despite doing her best to talk her way out of the situation. JANE RACKHAM

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

LAST EPISODE The interrogation section of the SAS selection course is painful to watch – although obviously not as painful as it is for the recruits who have to endure it. The remaining five celebrities have been ambushed, captured, deprived of sleep and put into extreme stress positions before being subjected to terrifying, relentless questioning.

What's especially fascinating is hearing the DS's assessment of – spoiler alert if you haven't yet watched last week's episode and don't know who's still in – former health secretary Matt Hancock's performance under pressure. JR

DOCUMENTARY

JFK: One Day in America

9pm, 10pm National Geographic Catch up via Now

NEW SERIES A three-part series looks at the assassination of President Kennedy 60 years ago. You may well have seen other JFK docs, but this one does a terrific job of connecting us emotionally to how that day unfolded, starting with a breakfast at a local chamber of commerce, where Kennedy jokes with the audience and cheering crowds outside are delighted when he goes to greet them. But we know what is coming, and the series' trump card is the first-hand accounts of secret service men, now old and gravel-voiced, and their evident pain, still, at what they couldn't prevent. The concluding episode airs tomorrow at 9pm. DBU

THE BARD AND ME
Dame Judi Dench talks to John Wilson about the importance of Shakespeare to her career

DOCUMENTARY

Judi Dench This Cultural Life: Shakespeare Special

7.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Here's a jewel in the crown of BBC4's Shakespeare season. Dame Judi Dench invites John Wilson to her home (minding the well-worn "I've been expecting you, Mr Bond" doormat as he goes) to discuss her career through the prism of her immense body of the Bard's work.

An audio version aired on Radio 4 yesterday, but it's a treat to watch as the 88-year-old actor rattles through with warmth and humility six decades of stage roles, including productions of Hamlet, Antony and Cleopatra and The Winter's Tale.

Dench also features in the programme that follows. Talking Shakespeare at 7.30pm sees Celia Imrie look at how the playwright's works have been adapted for TV and film, with contributions from stars such as Helen Mirren, Maggie Smith and David Tennant. FT

10.00 The Yorkshire Ripper Files: a Very British Crime Story

2/3. Manhunt. By 1979, the crimes were making national headlines, but the investigation was derailed by a series of letters and a tape claiming to come from the killer. West Yorkshire chief constable George Oldfield was so convinced of their authenticity that other suspects were ruled out if their handwriting differed or if they didn't have a North East accent like the one on the tape. Moreover, survivors and relatives of those who were attacked tell how their testimony was ignored. By January 1981 the net was closing as suspect Peter Sutcliffe was arrested. Director Liza Williams; Executive producers Nancy Bornat and Leanne Klein. First shown on BBC4 (S) (HD)

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY
Sonic the Hedgehog ★★★★★
 2.45-4.40pm C4

FANTASY The speedy blue video-game icon cuts a spiky dash in his feature debut. Games characters don't always transition well from small screen to big, but this particular cocktail of live action and CGI is fast-paced and fun, and is sure to keep kids and nostalgic gamers amused. The plot has space critter Sonic (voiced by Parks and Recreation's Ben Schwartz) enlisting the help of a small-town cop (James Marsden) in fleeing the clutches of a mad scientist, played with relish by a scene-stealing Jim Carrey. Despite some patchy animation, this is Sonic at the top of his game. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US/Jpn 2019, HD)

Rooster Cogburn ★★★
 12.40-2.50pm ITV4

WESTERN This is a memorable collaboration between John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn, with the Duke reprising his Oscar-winning role from True Grit and Hepburn playing the same kind of spinster she played in The African Queen. The direction by Stuart Millar is a mite sluggish, but the stars remain eminently watchable. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1975, HD)

Bill ★★★
 2.20-3.50pm BBC1

COMEDY The members of TV's Horrible Histories made a promising feature debut with this ribald period romp that follows "Bill" Shakespeare (Mathew Baynton) as he heads for London to seek his fortune. Among the cast, Ghosts star Simon Farnaby stands out for a popish earl, while Helen McCrory is a hilariously grotesque Elizabeth I. JAMIE HEALY (UK 2014, some violence, brief swearing, HD)

Goosebumps 2: Haunted Halloween ★★
 2.45-4.25pm ITV1

ADVENTURE The second film inspired by RL Stine's children's books features a trio of teens tackling a nasty ventriloquist's dummy who is able to bring Halloween

HouseSitter ★★★
 7.00-9.00pm Comedy Central

ROMCOM Goldie Hawn is at her dippiest as the waitress who overturns the life of Steve Martin's staid architect in this likeable if silly movie. Martin is recovering from a broken heart when he meets Hawn, who decides to help him by moving into the dream house he has built. There is more Goldie to enjoy in Private Benjamin, which follows. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1992, edited for language, HD)

The Expendables ★★
 9.00-11.00pm Sky Max

ACTION Writer/director Sylvester Stallone recruits a who's-who of action hero pals for this bombastic shoot-'em-up. When a mission in South America goes awry, mercenary Stallone enlists Jet Li, Jason Statham and fellow bruisers for an explosive showdown. Even fleeting cameos by Arnold Schwarzenegger and Bruce Willis do little to save the day. The Expendables 2 is showing on Friday, see review p105. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

Vampire Circus ★★★
 10.50pm-12.35am Legend

HORROR This isn't the freak show its title might suggest, but a fast-moving, imaginative Hammer tale of punishment and revenge. It's set in an isolated plague-ridden town in 19th-century central Europe that welcomes the arrival of a circus, until a vampire count's revenge becomes clear. Adrienne Corri's intense beauty shines like a beacon in the murky atmosphere. TH (UK 1971, violence, brief nudity)

FINAL RECKONING

David Morrissey
as George Oldfield

DRAMA

The Long Shadow 9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

SERIES FINALE

As the phalanx of male police officers face the press following the capture of Peter Sutcliffe (Mark Stobbart), there's an air of forced bonhomie. Backs may be being slapped, but those grins are rictus. And George Oldfield (David Morrissey) is sinking so low in his seat that his shirt collar is almost enveloping both neck and jowls. Embarrassed he should be, for Sutcliffe was interviewed nine times during the investigation. And in the wake of this major development, realisation is dawning that murders could have been prevented, had those investigating not been so convinced by the veracity of that now-notorious audio recording purporting to be from "the Ripper".

This finale's most potent scene encapsulates that sense of bitterness as we see a wall of photofits dating back to 1969, all drawn following testimony from survivors and all depicting someone with dark curls and a beard – their resemblance to the man now finally under arrest for killing 13 women plain for everyone to see. DAVID BROWN

ARTS

Between the Covers

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
Book worms, rejoice! Host Sara Cox is back with another stash of timely tomes and classic page-turners waiting to be pored over by her panel of famous literature lovers, and they're on top form.

To kick off the new series she is joined by actors Rob Delaney and Richard Armitage, comedian Jo Brand and presenter Anita Rani. The panel dissect Sebastian Faulks's latest, The Seventh Son, as well as advocating for their favourite books. Each speaks with such passion about their most beloved authors – especially Rob, who is an ardent fan of Alice Munro – that it's impossible not to be swept away by their enthusiasm. Expect to make some additions to your "to read" pile. KAY RIBEIRO

QUIZ

Mastermind/ Only Connect/ University Challenge

from 7.30pm BBC2 All via iPlayer
Another quizzing triple bill to get your week off to a knowledgeable start. In Clive Myrie's Mastermind chair, the specialist subjects are Mary, Queen of Scots, Sir Isaac Newton, musician Billy Bragg and sci-fi sitcom Red Dwarf. Smegging hell indeed. The filling in the inquisitive sandwich is Victoria Coren Mitchell, presiding over a battle between Antiphons and Suncatchers. In another close clash, it all comes down to the climactic missing vowels round. Finally, Amol Rajan fires the questions as Warwick take on Trinity College, Cambridge with a quarter-final spot at stake. Fingers on buzzers – and don't forget your lucky mascot. MICHAEL HOGAN

FOOD

MasterChef: the Professionals

9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer
Watching Monica Galetti and Marcus Wareing demonstrate the dish they've set for the skills test feels like receiving a personal masterclass – a luxury one chef might wish he'd had as he sighs and admits, "I've messed that up royally."

There are some interesting flavour combinations tonight, such as hake marinated in orange liqueur and served with a caviar sauce, while another chef cheekily serves the judges one of Marcus's own recipes. But it's Philippe's innovative turbot with a Beninese moyo sauce, and his tonka bean, mango and hibiscus dessert – inspired by his French and West African heritage – that really excites the panel. JANE RACKHAM

LAST IN SERIES

We've already seen that, despite the incredible advances of genetic science, some questions just can't be answered. Often it simply comes down to luck, explains Professor Turi King.

Postponed from last Wednesday, tonight's first two cases are especially tricky: since her mother died, Charlotte has wanted to trace her dad, although she has no clues as to his identity; Rogie only recently discovered that her late mother had a baby who was adopted. Meanwhile, Lvis is keen to know whether his father was, as he believes, Nigerian.

Thankfully, nobody regrets the process, despite some frustrating results. JR

9.00pm More4 Also: C4 streaming

This pathologically gentle travelogue makes slow TV glacial, as a trundle around the north of England brings the Bakers to North Yorkshire, aka "Herriot Country". The family's farming background colours a tour of James Herriot's home and they meet a local whose livestock was regularly tended by the legendary veterinarian. There are trips to a church and workshop that hold work by furniture craftsman Robert "Mouseman" Thompson, while Matt goes airborne in a glider. The Bakers are impeccably genial tourists and, while their journey takes few chances, it's fine as far as it goes (which, at a rough estimate, is about 30 miles this week). GABRIEL TATE

The Gilded Age

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

Catch up via Now

Fresh from her jilting in series one, the increasingly eligible Marian (Louisa Jacobson) has no shortage of suitors. While her aunt favours a boorish drunk with a good family, she's still making eyes at the clean-cut new-money architect from across the road – and giggling away with a handsome distant cousin (not blood related, the show awkwardly reminds us) who's caring manfully for his young daughter after the tragic death of his wife. Phwoar.

It's decadent, frothy fun – the main storyline is still about which opera house to patronise – but when it's done with this much wit and verve, it's hard to begrudge the subject matter. HUW FULLERTON

DOCUMENTARY

The Grave

10.45pm (11.05pm STV, 11.45pm Wales, UTV) ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

The Russian forces who occupied the eastern Ukrainian city of Izium last year were expelled after six months, but they left behind a mass grave in a forest outside the city limits. Searches of the grim site by Ukrainian forensic and criminal investigators has yielded 449 bodies, some identifiable, but many decomposed.

This harrowing documentary (in Ukrainian with English subtitles and captions) concentrates on a father attempting to discover if his son is alive, and a torture victim trying to find his brother's remains. There may even be more mass graves. As one mother says of those who killed her son, "No punishment is great enough." JOHN AIZLEWOOD

COMEDY

Dad's Army: the Animations 8.00pm Gold Catch up via Now

Gold has been a loyal servant to Dad's Army fans over the years. 2019's The Lost Episodes had a new cast performing original scripts; this series gives animated treatments to those three stories, using surviving audio-only recordings, and has added two Christmas shorts that were also wiped from the BBC archive.

Tonight, The Loneliness of the Long Distance Walker, first shown in 1969, sees the platoon try to help Walker dodge the call-up. It's a treat to hear the original actors deliver less familiar lines (though David Benson and Jack Lane have been drafted in as Walker and Pike) and the characters have been uncannily captured by the artists: Frazer with his thunderous eyebrows, Godfrey's sleepiness, and so on. The episodes are all in black and white, as originally broadcast, and the attention to detail extends to the lovely hand-painted backgrounds. A DVD of the series is out on 27 November.

FILM OF THE DAY

Freaky ★★★ 9.00-11.05pm Film4 15

COMEDY HORROR Friday the 13th meets The Hot Chick in this gory, amusing twist on the body-swap movie. Bullied high-schooler Millie (Kathryn Newton) has her life turned inside out when she's attacked by a psycho (Vince Vaughn) whose mystical dagger causes the two to switch bodies. Stuck as a 50-year-old man on the run, Millie has just 24 hours to put things right. It's a brilliant concept that director Christopher Landon (Happy Death Day) injects with some lively, blood-drenched set pieces. And Vaughn is excellent, delivering an affecting performance of surprising vulnerability. JOSH WINNING (US 2020, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

The Gunfight at Dodge City ★★

12.20-2.20pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN Despite its lovely CinemaScope vistas, this is a rather meandering picture as director Joseph M Newman counts down the minutes to the inevitable showdown between reformed outlaw Joel McCrea and trigger-happy bad guys. A snarling Richard Anderson leads the assorted desperados. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1959, HD)

Iron Eagle III ★★

1.00-3.00pm Legend 15

ACTION A far cry from its predecessors, this silly enterprise was John Glen's first feature after directing five James Bond movies. Yet the film is not without its pleasures. Louis Gossett Jr returns as the USAF ace who recruits his pals at a flying circus to deliver a South American village from the clutches of a drug baron. DP (US 1992, edited for language, violence)

One Million Years BC ★★★ 4.00-6.00pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

ADVENTURE Raquel Welch wears a furry bikini and roams the wilderness in this Jurassic lark. Made by Hammer, it's an absolute hoot, as it follows the war between the Rock People and the Shell People, and throws in some wobbly prehistoric monsters, courtesy of effects maestro Ray Harryhausen. ADRIAN TURNER (US/UK 1966)

Thunderball ★★★

8.00-10.40pm ITV4 PG

SPY The James Bond series went truly comic strip with this gadget-filled romp. Playing 007 for the fourth time, Sean Connery is still getting a kick out of the part, and he has a worthy foe in Adolfo Celi's Spectre agent, who hijacks two nuclear weapons belonging to Nato. The pace is a bit choppy, but John Stears won an Oscar for his visual effects. DP (UK 1965, may be edited for violence, HD)

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 2 ★★★ 8.00-10.30pm

Sky Showcase 12

ADVENTURE In this fourth and final instalment of the dystopian saga, Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) hurries to the front line as the freedom fighters launch an attack on the Capitol. Lawrence is ably supported by a steely Julianne Moore, while Philip Seymour Hoffman is a poignant presence in his final performance. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2015, violence, HD)

Shooter ★★★

9.00-11.35pm 5 Action 15

ACTION A conspiracy thriller that's not afraid to wear its politics on its sleeve, this sees disillusioned ex-marine sharpshooter Mark Wahlberg trying to capture a sniper who's planning to kill the US president. It's hardly The Day of the Jackal, yet it hammers home its anger over the corruption of America's political elite with unerring accuracy. JAMIE RUSSELL (US 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

Hellboy II: the Golden Army ★★★

10.40pm-1.00am ITV4 12

FANTASY Guillermo del Toro's follow-up to Hellboy is epic in its breadth and ambition, as Ron Perlman's demon superhero goes up against a renegade elf prince (Luke Goss) who will stop at nothing to conquer the human realm. Effortlessly marrying dry wit and unnerving creepiness, this is superior myth-making from a master of the art. ALAN JONES (US/Ger 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

BlacKkKlansman ★★★

11.05pm-1.45am Film4 15

CRIME Spike Lee's fine film recounts the extraordinary true story of Ron Stallworth, a black cop who infiltrated the Ku Klux Klan in the 1970s. John David Washington is great fun in the lead, while the reliable Adam Driver plays his Jewish colleague. The film is as playful as it is political, and Lee struts his film-making stuff with ambition and gusto. EAS (US 2018, violence, swearing, racist language, Col/BW, HD)

Louis Theroux and

INTERVIEW

Louis Theroux Interviews Anthony Joshua 9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

There's a telling moment in Louis Theroux's latest profile. It's a warm, revealing portrait of the two-time world heavyweight champion boxer, who comes across as everything you would hope from his public image – a sharp, funny, head-screwed-on kind of guy. He knows his aura has slipped since losing his belts, but insists his heart is still in it, that he still has the drive to fight his way back to being world champion.

Then there's a sequence where Theroux and Joshua go to Watford, where he grew up, and call at the house of his aunt. The two reminisce on a sofa and look at old family photos. "You will get the belts back," she assures him, adding, "Three-times winner!" And behind her,

AJ repeats the phrase, chewing his lip and looking distant. "God willing," he mutters, and it's about as far from the bravado of a pre-fight press conference as you could get.

Elsewhere, in a fascinating encounter, AJ swaps freestyle raps with Louis, ponders the risk of brain injury and recalls his "wake and bake" school days. DAVID BUTCHER

FOOD

The Great British Bake Off

8pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming
Bake Off's technical challenges are notoriously difficult, but this week's is an absolute car crash. The bakers' steamed puddings are so terrible that Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith rank them from worst to least awful and they almost need a straw to taste them because they're so underbaked.

Although the mood in the tent remains delightfully upbeat, the judges' comments are increasingly harsh. "What are you thinking?" asks an incredulous Paul about someone's flavourings, while the meringue bombe showstoppers range from "A triumph" to "You've let yourself down with that!". To the bakers' credit, there are no tears, apart from tears of laughter. JANE RACKHAM

Tony Robinson's Marvellous Machines

8pm Yesterday Catch up via Now

NEW SERIES

Sir Tony plants his flag somewhere between Richard Hammond and Gregg Wallace for a science-y new series. So he marvels at big bits of engineering, but there are also factory visits where he can look suitably thrilled about, say, a JCB production line making a hulking "Swiss army knife of pothole repairs".

It's an impressive beast, but watching roads get fixed is only so much fun. More intriguing is the sequence where we meet a caesium fountain. Caesium clocks are unbelievably precise, but the lab has designed a new optical atomic clock that centres on a single, trapped ion of a metal called ytterbium, and it's 100 times more accurate. DBu

Rolf Harris: Hiding in Plain Sight

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

It was the Jimmy Savile scandal that pulled the stopper from a noxious phial when it came to the exposure of sexual abuse being committed by public figures. Yet when Operation Yewtree swooped on Rolf Harris in 2013, he thought the sheen of his celebrity status would allow him to glide through police questioning.

As is revealed in the conclusion of this excoriating profile, he even sang Sun Arise from beginning to end to officers left baffled by his blasé attitude. Following conviction, that failure to acknowledge his crimes remained – in letters sent from his cell, the disgraced artist painted himself as a victim, describing his accusers as money-grabbing opportunists. DAVID BROWN

TRAVEL

Portillo's Andalusia

9pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

NEW SERIES

As Michael Portillo lives for part of the year just outside Seville and last year walked the Pyrenees exploring his own Basque heritage, he's the perfect guide to Andalusia.

In this series he's taking us to his six favourite locations, starting in Granada, famous for the Alhambra – the majestic hilltop stronghold with its glorious, sprawling gardens. Here he meets food writer and fellow Andalusian fan Fiona Dunlop, who believes the area is unique in its fusion of the Arab culinary world with the European one. He also tries his hand at a potter's wheel.

There was no preview as we went to press, but we predict that Michael will be sporting one of his most colourful outfits for the trip. JR

HISTORY

Ancient Empires

9.00pm Sky History Catch up: Now

Documentaries about the ancient world invariably include dramatic reconstruction involving bored-looking extras in dusty locations. But this handsome series, which explores the lives of Alexander the Great, Cleopatra and Julius Caesar, makes a decent fist of the job.

In this first episode, a phalanx of historians and military tacticians run through Alexander's attempt to create an empire stretching from Greece to India, until his exhausted army eventually had enough. In the dramatised sections, Alexander is played by Tom York (Poldark), who bellows lines like "Eat and sleep well tonight – for tomorrow we march at dawn!" with aplomb. GILL CRAWFORD

REALITY

Banged Up

9.15pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

This curious reality show begins to find its feet tonight, as the reformed ex-cons drop the posturing and open up to their famous cellmates a little. Sid Owen and Marcus Luther are joined by 2020 Strictly finalist HRVY and former MP Neil Parish. Despite warnings, HRVY wears a gold chain into the ersatz prison, while Parish is instantly targeted by a vindictive lag with a penchant for schoolboy pranks – a crash course in self-defence with a sharpened toothbrush ensues.

As Owen helps an acting workshop and Luther attends an anger management course, lessons are learnt about forgoing judgement for empathy; actual real-world solutions for an inadequate system, however, remain elusive. GABRIEL TATE

COMEDY

Live at the Apollo

9.45pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The exuberant Nabil Abdulrashid, best known for reaching the final of Britain's Got Talent in 2020, hosts tonight's return of the stand-up comedy showcase. His opening routine is built around slang. "I was born in London," he says, "but my parents had me move back to Nigeria to make sure I learnt to speak English properly."

He is followed by Jake Lambert, whose material mostly consists of funny things he once said. But Manchester comedian Rachel Fairburn proves the highlight of the evening, with her gags about living in London as a northerner ("Are you just down here for the weekend?"). Her best joke is unprintable. STEPHEN KELLY

WARRIORS
A re-enactment of the 1797 battle of Parramatta, filmed on location in New South Wales

DOCUMENTARY
The Australian Wars 9.05pm BBC4

NEW SERIES

"Are we ready to face the past that made our country what it is? Or go on living a lie?" asks film-maker Rachel Perkins in this first of three eye-opening documentaries. The wars in the title are the violent encounters between the European settlers and the First Nations peoples whose land they snatched. These conflicts may not be taught in schools, but they're no less desperate or bloody for all that.

Perkins (who has both European and Indigenous Australian ancestry) paints a picture of colonising settlers who used brutal and amoral methods to enforce unjust territorial claims, but doesn't shy away from the Indigenous people's deadly response, ranging from ambushes to full-blown campaigns of guerrilla war. As many as 100,000 people died across the two sides. It's an unsettling and somewhat shameful slice of buried history. CERI THOMAS

The Big Sick ★★★★★

ROMCOM This charming movie about a Pakistani-American man falling in love with a white girl stars Kumail Nanjiani and is based on his own story. When Kumail starts dating Emily (Zoe Kazan), he knows it will upset his strict Muslim family. But when Emily falls ill, Kumail realises just how much he really cares about her. The script – co-written by Nanjiani with the real-life Emily – is often laugh-out-loud funny, bravely tackling interracial tensions in post-9/11 America. Really, though, it's just an old-fashioned love story, and it works beautifully. DAMON WISE (US 2017, swearing, HD)

A Question of Suspense ★★★★★

4.45–6.00pm Talking Pictures TV

CRIME In this slow-burner, Noelle Middleton realises that an old love (Peter Reynolds) is responsible for the death of her accountant partner (Norman Rodway). She decides to rekindle her relationship with the killer in the hope of catching him out. Director Max Varnel makes effective use of the Wicklow coastline locations. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1961, BW)

"Crocodile" Dundee ★★★★★

7.10–9.00pm Film4

15

ADVENTURE This is the first and best in the series about the Aussie outback hero. Paul Hogan took his lager-advert he-man into the big time with this New York-set "fish-out-of-water" tale, and the result is as agreeable as if it were Tarzan himself getting to grips with the concrete jungle. TOM HUTCHINSON (Aus/US 1986, edited for content, HD)

King Kong ★★★★★

9.00pm–12.45am

12

5 Star FANTASY Director Peter Jackson lovingly honours the 1933 monster-movie classic with this thrilling remake. Jack Black heads to a remote island to shoot his latest film, only for his star (Naomi Watts) to be kidnapped by the natives and given to their god, Kong. Sensational entertainment ensues. ALAN JONES (NZ/US 2005, violence, language, Col/BW, HD)

Robin Hood ★★

12

ACTION A slick-looking prequel to the myth, this sees young Robin of Loxley (Taron Egerton) returning home after fighting in the Crusades to tackle a crooked sheriff (Ben Mendelsohn) with the help of a Moor Little John (Jamie Foxx). Director Otto Bathurst frames the action nicely, but the narrative struggles to engage. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2018, violence, HD)

William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet ★★★★★

10.40pm–12.30am BBC1

(starts 11.10pm in N Ireland and Wales)

TRAGEDY Baz Luhrmann's flamboyant update of the romantic tragedy casts Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes as the star-crossed lovers. It transports them to MTV-era "Verona Beach", a place of gang warfare, raves, motorbikes and party drugs. The dialogue is true to the text, but delivered as if it were modern parlance. ANDREW COLLINS (US/Aus/Can 1996, some violence, a sex scene, HD)

Road to Perdition ★★★★★

CRIME Tom Hanks plays against type here as a feared hitman working for Irish-American Mob boss Paul Newman, who regards him as a son. Professional and familial loyalties become blurred when Hanks's own family is targeted. Sam Mendes's evocative gangster movie will utterly transport you back to moody 1930s Chicago. JASON CARO (US 2002, violence, swearing, HD)

Hit the Road ★★★★★

12

DRAMA A family embarks on an eventful road trip in the richly humane debut from Iranian writer/director Panah Panahi. Sometimes funny, sometimes sad, the film draws a delicate power from the car's confines and the remote landscapes alike. The result is a far-reaching fable of connection and separation, handled with wit and tenderness. KEVIN HARLEY (Iran 2021, swearing, HD)

Body of Water ★★★★★

DRAMA Writer/director Lucy Brydon delivers a startling take on the effects of anorexia in this empathetic film. Sian Brooke stars as a former war photographer whose struggle with eating disorders runs parallel to her conflicts with her teen-rebel daughter (Fabienne Piolini-Castle) and her own less-than-sympathetic mother (Amanda Burton). KH (UK 2020, drug abuse, swearing, HD)

The Secret Genius of Modern Life

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

By the time the credits roll on this episode, you'll be hunting around for your passport and a UV torch. As Professor Hannah Fry discovers, there are intricate, hidden designs among the pages that can't be seen with the naked eye. These surprisingly beautiful patterns are just one of numerous security measures that are built into the document's DNA.

From the thick page of polycarbonate that holds all your information (the Inside the Factory-style insight into how this gets onto the page is fascinating) to holograms and a biometric chip, today's passports are all geared towards weeding out forgeries. Fry is as engaging and good-humoured as ever as she discovers how many fakes are encountered by Border Force each week, why the First World War initially prompted the introduction of passports and how a Parisian police officer was instrumental in standardising their photos. Developments in artificial intelligence lead to a final – and slightly terrifying – look to the not-so-distant future that questions whether we'll soon even need them at all.

When it comes to the Underworld factory, there must be a plotline picker wheel that gets spun by the Coronation Street writers. Will the arrow land on, "They've got too many orders and everyone has to work through the night"? Might it be, "There aren't any orders and everyone's out of a job"? Or could it be, "Everyone is so annoyed that they go on strike"?

Tonight, though, we're getting a kind of mash-up factory storyline. So, yes, there's a last-minute order. Hooray! But Carla hasn't got any money to pay her machinists. Boo! And so, in a fit of pique, the workers down tools. Can Carla rally the troops and save viewers from the sight of Beth and Sean on the picket line with placards? DAVID BROWN

If such a thing as career-break envy exists, you're sure to feel waves of it watching Sylvia (Emilia Fox), who's paused her job at MI6 to buy an Italian house, which she's now renovating. Time, money and clothing don't appear to be pressing issues, as the building work is as extensive as Sylvia's wardrobe, and she's able to pootle about embroiling herself in a mystery involving a skeleton found at an archaeological dig.

No doubt her spy bosses will make their presence felt at some point but, for now, sleuthing in the sunshine seems to be her top priority, though there's also a little tentative romancing of Capitano Riva. It's little wonder that air travel back to London doesn't even get mentioned. DB

Shakespeare: Rise of a Genius

NEW SERIES

A handsomely upholstered series tells William Shakespeare's life story. But what is that story? Facts about his life are famously scarce so a remarkable line-up of contributors, from Judi Dench to Gordon Brown, fill in the gaps with empathy and guesswork.

Featuring what press notes call "cinematic drama vignettes", it builds into a relatable tale of how a glovemaking son became our greatest writer. We begin in 1587 as a 23-year-old father-of-three leaves his family behind to seek his fortune in the creative hotbed of London. Also tonight, Richard Eyre introduces his 2018 production of King Lear (10.30pm BBC4). DAVID BUTCHER

Payback

9.00pm ITV1
Full series available on ITVX

LAST EPISODE

Payback becomes a gender-flipped take on The Night Manager, with reluctant woman-on-the-inside Lexie tapping into the paranoia of crime lord Cal. Like so many TV arch criminals before him, he's constantly on the lookout for those who might be disloyal – never realising that the person guiding him towards supposedly treacherous colleagues is the one who wants to see them all get shafted.

This would, ordinarily, be alive with jeopardy, but all the talk of shell companies, money trails and shipping containers unfortunately remains a bit of a dramatic buzzkill. As with the current state of Cal's bank accounts, it all feels rather empty. DB

Grand Designs

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming
Complex, stressful situations are par for the course on Grand Designs, but if anyone is cut out to take the strains in their stride it's surely a top divorce lawyer? Liz, who was part of the original legal team acting for Princess Diana in her divorce, and her partner Duncan want to build the UK's first "Passivhaus Premium" (a specific energy-efficient home that generates more power than it uses) in the Cotswolds.

Reality soon bites and living apart during the build puts a predictable strain on their relationship. Although you can't help but laugh when they're trying to choose a colour for the interior. The two pale beige hues Liz is agonising between look identical to me. FT

DRAMA

Dark Winds

9.00pm Alibi Catch up via Now
Ronald Knox, mystery writer and member of the Detection Club, in 1929 penned a Ten Commandments for Detective Fiction, which included such laws as "not more than one secret room or passage is allowable" and "the detective himself must not commit the crime".

Although some of his rules are now outdated (one is offensive), it's a decent enough list for the most part, though the writers of Dark Winds have obviously tossed it into the wastebin, as episode four features an egregious violation, one that always rankles with me whenever it crops up in a murder mystery. No spoilers, but it's a definite stumble in a series that, until this point, has played fair with viewers. DB

David Baddiel: Jews Don't Count

10.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming
It's an interesting time for Channel 4 to repeat David Baddiel's penetrating 2022 documentary, adapted from his polemic book of the same title. Recent events mean that the tone and terms used when reporting or discussing violent attacks are being more fiercely policed than ever.

Take a step back with Baddiel's look at the way progressive opinion is often, in his view, strangely deaf to anti-semitism. "In a culture where all forms of racism are being monitored and called out... one form is apparently inaudible," he argues. A battery of eloquent contributors, including Sarah Silverman, David Schwimmer and Neil Gaiman, back him up. DBU

Shetland

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer
Ruth Calder (Ashley Jensen) has an unorthodox approach when it comes to making an impression on new colleagues. She's only been in post five minutes and already a suspect is using the DI as an alibi, having spent the previous night with her. The procurator fiscal is looking mightily unimpressed, so let's just hope for Ruth's sake that her not-so-former flame Cal Innes (Jamie Sives) turns out to be innocent.

One person who's definitely mired in misdeeds, though, is hitman Howell (the ever-reliable Don Gilet). He's bringing a touch of Fargo to Shetland as he waves his firearm around trying to get help for his injured associate Nowak from an innocent island crofter by the name of Agnes. She finds herself staring down the barrel of Howell's gun as she tends to Nowak's bullet wound in fraught scenes that leave us worried for her welfare. DB Smart TV: page 29

RT Ep 5. Having bought a plot in the Cotswolds, environmental consultant Duncan and solicitor Liz plan to build a ground-breaking eco-home that will produce four times the energy it needs. While Liz remains in their London house, Duncan moves out to live near the site and oversee the construction of the cathedral-like structure, which comprises walls of triple-glazed windows and three zig-zagging roofs. Almost inevitably, their 18-month schedule soon spirals and living apart takes its toll on the couple. Kevin McCloud follows their progress. See p79.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY
1917 ★★★★★ 10.40pm-12.30am BBC1
(starts 11.10pm in Wales)

WAR Two young soldiers (George MacKay and Dean-Charles Chapman) must deliver a life-saving letter to the front line in director Sam Mendes's ambitious First World War odyssey. The dangerous mission takes the pair across a booby-trapped no man's land and into recently occupied German territory, all filmed to give the illusion of being shot in one take by Oscar-winning cinematographer Roger Deakins. There are also terrific cameos from Andrew Scott, Benedict Cumberbatch, Mark Strong and Richard Madden along the way. ALAN JONES (UK/US/Ind 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

Doctor in the House ★★★★★ 10.35am-12.25pm
Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY This film launched the popular St Swithin's series and made a matinée idol out of Dirk Bogarde. Kenneth More, Donald Sinden and Donald Houston are on top form as the students doing retakes, while Bogarde oozes charm and quiet comic flair as Simon Sparrow. But stealing all their thunder is James Robertson-Justice as Sir Lancelot Spratt. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1954)

Torpedo Run ★★★ 12.05-2.10pm 5 Action U

WAR Joseph Pevney's claustrophobic submarine drama boasts a tense plot, as commander Glenn Ford accidentally blows up a Japanese prison ship with his own family on board. The chase is then on to find the aircraft carrier that used the ship as a shield. This is from the most successful period in Ford's career, and he gives a mesmerising performance. TONY SLOMAN (US 1958)

The Legend of Zorro ★★★★★ 6.25-9.00pm Film4 PG

SWASHBUCKLER Antonio Banderas and Catherine Zeta-Jones return for this sequel to 1998's The Mask of Zorro. The story is set in 1850, with the pair now married parents, but Zorro is finding it hard to give up the mask, and his refusal to prioritise his family causes a domestic crisis. The movie is a lot of fun, but some may feel there's too much cheesy slapstick. SLOAN FREER (US 2005, edited for content, HD)

Quatermass II ★★★★★ 9.05-10.50pm
Talking Pictures TV 12

SCI-FI This second movie in Hammer's Quatermass trilogy overcomes its low budget with a fascinating tale of government conspiracies and alien invasions, all set against a backdrop of postwar paranoia. Great writing (Nigel Kneale), superb direction (Val Guest) and Gerald Gibbs's stark photography combine to make it one of the best sci-fi allegories of the 1950s. AJ (UK 1957, BW)

Man of Steel ★★★ 10.45pm-1.05am ITV1
(This film was dropped by ITV as RT was going to press) 12

SUPERHERO Henry Cavill's first outing as Superman melds an origins story with a Kryptonian bad-guy invasion. Cavill certainly looks the part, and the film picks up pace when General Zod (Michael Shannon) arrives. But director Zack Snyder struggles to invest the film with emotional depth, and Amy Adams as Lois Lane has little to do. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2013, violence, HD)

Talking Pictures TV 15

THRILLER This polished revenge B-movie stars Lori Loughlin and Shannon Presby as orphaned siblings who go to live with their uncle Eddie Jones at his run-down amusement park in Florida. When Loughlin is harassed by thugs, an all-out war of nerves and violence begins. James Spader gives a top-notch performance as the gang leader. AJ (US 1984, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, nudity)

Kenny ★★★★★ 11.00pm-12.50am
Sky Documentaries 12

DOCUMENTARY The football is only part of the story in this moving portrait of Liverpool hero Kenny Dalglish. Alongside glorious archive clips of King Kenny in action, director Stewart Sugg covers the three stadium tragedies – Ibrox, Heysel and Hillsborough – that Dalglish witnessed during his career. The sight of the Anfield legend battling his emotions leaves a deep impression. DP (UK 2017, swearing)

The Patriot ★★★ 11.10pm-2.30am Great Movies 15

WAR Set during the American War of Independence, this stars Mel Gibson as a South Carolina farmer who fights the British army alongside his son (Heath Ledger). The battles are well staged, but some may balk at the pantomime villainy of Jason Isaacs's colonel, as well as the historically inaccurate atrocities that he commits. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 2000, violence, swearing)

DRAMA

The Newsreader

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The 1987 Australian federal election – that was a night to remember, am I right? OK, so I'm guessing that's a big fat "no" for most of the UK. But the fantastic thing about this opener to series two of The Newsreader is that it takes an event that few here will be able to recall (me included) and turns it into pulse-pounding drama.

The reason for that is down to its setting and stars, the former a commercial newsroom where panic is the default mode, the latter being terrific lead actors Anna Torv and Sam Reid as high-backcombed Helen Norville and sharp-cheekboned Dale Jennings. They're now a partnership in front of and behind the camera, but there are problems looming on both the professional and domestic fronts.

First, we get a whiff of sexism as the CEO objects to Helen being "aggressive" in her incisive questioning of politicians, and then the issue of Dale's bisexuality resurfaces when he receives an unexpected proposition. And those, my fellow Newsreader fans, are just the headlines – so be sure to catch further coverage tomorrow at 9pm.

SOAP

EastEnders

7.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Kathy's customers who like their bacon on the crispy side should get their orders in, as the café is about to go kablooey. Yes, tonight's the night of the highly anticipated EastEnders autumn stunt and the Albert Square regular who's set to start the fire is a cash-strapped Rocky (Brian Conley). He plans to burn the place down and claim money on the insurance – but what he hasn't bargained on is Bobby being inside as the flames take hold.

This, incidentally, isn't the first time the caff has been the scene of a conflagration: back in 2009, it was Bradley dicing with death when the building exploded. He survived (on that occasion anyway), but there's no guarantee that Bobby will be as lucky in 2023. DB

Mary Makes It Easy

7.30pm BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

Mary Berry's face when Radio 1 DJ Jordan North presents her with his all-shop-bought "picky tea" is hilarious. She's clearly not impressed and whisks him off to her kitchen for a cookery lesson so that he can show off to his friends at his next dinner party. He's thrilled with what he calls a "bad boy" of a mushroom soufflé, says that salmon and Asian slaw is "right up my street" and a red velvet cake is a "bobby dazzler".

More simple recipes follow in this second episode of the series, including dauphinoise potatoes that Mary says should be taken out of the oven "when the aroma is starting to drive you mad". How adorable is that? JANE RACKHAM

DOCUMENTARY

Inside the Tower of London

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

The jolly, fact-filled series about the history and workings of the Tower continues with 200 new yeoman warders' uniforms being painstakingly made for the King's coronation. We also see how the moat (previously the site of a barracks, a vegetable plot, a poppy display and a wildflower garden, but in early 2023 a muddy patch) is prepared for re-sowing. Meanwhile curator Tracy Borman investigates a tragedy that affected Henry VIII's relationship with the Tower for ever.

The snippets of historical information are as fascinating as usual, but it's those cheery Beefeaters, with their insights and sense of humour, that make this such fun. JR

COMEDY

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

All series, Alex Horne has been hinting at a secret task hidden somewhere for the contestants – and this week we find out what it is when all five are sent on a treasure hunt to seek it out. After a lot of build-up, it's a more conventional game than you might have expected, though as ever there's a bit of a twist in the tail.

Otherwise, they must complete a luck-themed obstacle course, play an unusual version of charades and convince a child they're a real sleepwalker – one of the odder collections of tasks in one episode. And as ever, the comedians' solutions are just as off the wall – including one contestant who uses a pink flamingo and some very underhand tactics to triumph. HUW FULLERTON

Dylan Thomas Night

from 9pm BBC4 Also via iPlayer

To mark the 70th anniversary of troubled Welsh poet Dylan Thomas's death on 9 November 1953 (allegedly after drinking 18 straight whiskies in a New York bar), BBC4 has assembled a fantastic tribute.

The playful 2003 Arena film Dylan Thomas: from Grave to Cradle and the 2014 version of Under Milk Wood (10.15pm) – edited from performances by a galaxy of Welsh stars, including Tom Jones as Captain Cat – are highlights, as is Dame Siân Phillips Remembers... Under Milk Wood (10pm). Few know Thomas's play better, as she not only appeared with Richard Burton in the 1971 film, but also with Michael Sheen in the 2021 National Theatre revival. The film The Edge of Love is at 11.15pm. CERI THOMAS

All Creatures Great and Small

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

This latest series has felt like And Then There Were None, but without the murders. First, we had to adjust to the absence of Tristan, then James got called up, and now both Helen and Mrs Hall are looking to leave Skeldale House. At this rate, we'll have a Christmas special with Siegfried living on his own there and barking at inanimate objects.

Hopefully, the odd veterinary emergency will keep him occupied. After all, where would this show be without its sick animals? And for this finale, there are two: Smokey the calf (who has stomach troubles) and Rock the dog (who's troubled by an oversized testicle). DB

Lucy Beaumont's sitcom manages the neat trick of broad naturalism, happy to indulge a spot of slapstick, an absurd plot twist or an arch cameo in the knowledge that the core cast will keep things grounded.

This second series launches with a double bill, as expectant mother Toni frets over her pregnancy and dreams that Emmerdale could ignite her stagnant acting career, sister Paula hurls herself into DIY to avoid reckoning with her daughter's miscarriage, and Rana becomes increasingly alarmed about the prospect of an early menopause.

There are more smiles than belly laughs, but the evocation of midlife drift is acute. GABRIEL TATE

DOCUMENTARY

Inside the Undertakers

9.00pm BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

Death comes to everyone but, like many of us, Stacey Dooley is terrified about the inevitable end of her life and (typically British, this) feels uncomfortable talking about it. In this film she joins a long-established Nottingham undertakers to observe the hidden process between someone's death and their funeral. The sight of a baby's body in the funeral home's morgue really distresses her, while a chat with a woman planning her own funeral ("With a cardboard coffin... what happens if it rains?") is more light-hearted. What strikes Stacey most is the care and reverence shown to the deceased by everyone.

Seeing grieving families or hearing from people facing their own death is unsettling, of course, and you'll need a heart of stone not to shed a tear. But it is a subject we should address more openly. JR

8.00 MasterChef: the Professionals

The winners of this week's heats return for the quarter-final, beginning with an invention test in which they have to prepare and cook a standout tart – a sweet or savoury pastry treat that will blow the competition out of the water. They also need to dish up the perfect accompaniment of a side dish that compliments the flavours of the main event without stealing its thunder. The next round sees them each tasked with cooking a two-course menu for top food critics Tom Parker Bowles, Jimi Famurewa and Grace Dent. The three chefs who impress the most will earn their place in Knockout Week. (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Stacey Dooley: inside the Undertakers

RT The presenter tackles the subject of death by immersing herself in the world of undertaking. As a new mother, Stacey has found that her worries for the future have only increased, along with her fear of death. To try and overcome her fears, she travels to Nottingham to go behind the scenes at AW Lymn, a family-run funeral business founded in 1907, spending time with everybody from flower arrangers and coffin makers to embalmers. She also meets with bereaved families, and sees the role faith can play in an increasingly secular society. See page 89.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Edge of Love ★★

15

DRAMA This emotionally charged tale loosely based on real events stars Keira Knightley as Vera, the childhood sweetheart of poet Dylan Thomas (Matthew Rhys), and tells the story of what happens when she runs into her married ex-lover in war-torn London. Thomas and wife Caitlin (Sienna Miller) end up moving in with Vera – who is now working as a nightclub singer – but it soon becomes clear that three's a crowd. The film is showing as part of an evening celebrating Thomas on BBC4, see Choice page 89. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (UK 2008, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

One-Eyed Jacks ★★

12.50-2.50pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN In the only film to be directed by Marlon Brando (he took over from Stanley Kubrick, who left to make Spartacus), the star plays the bandit who seeks revenge on his mentor (Karl Malden) after a stinging betrayal. It's a fine, adult work, with the Monterey seascapes making a unique setting. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961, some violence)

Rich and Strange ★★

3.10-4.50pm

Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY DRAMA Alfred Hitchcock made this curious, often rather cruel film when his career was in the doldrums. Henry Kendall and Joan Barry star as the young married couple who spend an inheritance on a world cruise, during which their relationship comes under strain after a shipwreck. Hitchcock's usual stylistic touches are present, but this is a slight affair. ALLEN EYLES (UK 1932, BW)

Buchanan Rides Alone ★★

4.35-6.20pm Film4 PG

WESTERN This colourful B-feature is based on a novel from writer Jonas Ward's "Buchanan" cowboy series and finds Randolph Scott in less taciturn mood than usual. He plays the lone-wolf cowboy embroiled in a border-town feud, and the plot convolutions are effectively handled by genre specialist Budd Boetticher. TS (US 1958, HD)

The Card ★★

5.00-6.50pm

Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Adapted from Arnold Bennett's novel, this is a stylish rags-to-riches story set in the author's beloved Five Towns. Eric Ambler's script is full of smart situations and witty lines, but Alec Guinness is hardly stretched as the laundress's son who achieves wealth and respectability through his Machiavellian schemes. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1952, BW)

A Call to Spy ★★

6.35-9.00pm Great Movies 12

THRILLER This is a heartfelt tribute to the real-life women who were crucial to the setting up of Churchill's spy network in Vichy France. Sarah Megan Thomas (who also wrote the script and produced) gives a committed performance as Virginia Hall, an American with a prosthetic leg who worked for the British. War-movie clichés do crop up, but this remains a fascinating tale. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2019, may be edited for content)

Military Wives ★★

9.00-11.15pm Film4 12

DRAMA Director Peter Cattaneo's broadly comic account of the real-life rise of a female-voice choir follows a group of women as they sing at a British Army base while their soldier partners are on tour in Afghanistan. A class struggle ensues between officer's wife Kristin Scott Thomas and laid-back slob Sharon Horgan, but a feel-good climax will have you cheering and crying. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 2019, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Species ★★

9.00-11.00pm Sky Sci-Fi 18

SCI-FI Natasha Henstridge plays the dangerous spawn of combined alien and human DNA in this sexy shocker. Ben Kingsley, Michael Madsen and Alfred Molina are part of a task force trying to track down the hybrid menace. Nifty designs by surrealist HR Giger (of Alien fame) and a glossy sheen help disguise the fact that this is a total B-movie. ALAN JONES (US 1995, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

A Child Is Waiting ★★

Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA After director John Cassavetes was fired, producer Stanley Kramer turned a reputedly tough movie into a sentimental one that tub-thumps its message about the care of an autistic child. Burt Lancaster and Judy Garland star as the child's psychologists, and Gena Rowlands (Cassavetes's wife) plays his mother. The result is powerful and well-acted. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1962, BW)

Ghosts 8.30pm BBC1 All episodes on iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

The phantoms of Button House – and the Captain in particular – spring into action to avert a crisis. “Operation Be Really Really Nice” is his solution, and Alison his target. Because she and her husband Mike learn of a big offer on the house that “could solve all of our problems” – and their dead house-sharers overhear everything.

That aside, Pat and Robin fall for the same TV weather presenter, and Mike’s lovelorn mate comes to stay.

For viewers of a certain age, Ghosts may initially have put them happily in mind of light-hearted looks at the afterlife such as Rentaghost, The Ghosts of Motley Hall and Randall and Hopkirk (Deceased).

But over 33 episodes, this heart-warming comedy has revealed another dimension: a quiet profundity with much to say about life and legacy. Last week’s episode felt more dramatic, and if tonight’s seems slightly unresolved, don’t worry: Ghosts is coming back at Christmas, for one last, haunting hurrah. We can’t wait.

FUNDRAISING

Game On! For Children in Need

7.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer
A show about gaming may not appeal to all – but this “live gaming extravaganza”, hosted by Vick Hope and Steffan Powell, is raising money for Children in Need. At Nottingham’s E Sports arena Confetti X, a range of celebrities and content creators will take part in a range of games through the night, with the backstage action (finger warm-up exercises? Rousing pep talks?) live-streamed in partnership with TikTok. Among the games are F1 Sim Rigs – whizzing around the new Las Vegas Grand Prix virtual track – an energetic dance-off on Just Dance 2023, and augmented-reality, sports-based shenanigans with Hado. Crucially, the best “game” of the night is picking up your phone to donate what you can. KAY RIBEIRO

GARDENING

Beechgrove Gardens in Winter

7.30pm (not Wales or N Ireland) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
At this time of the year some colour in the garden is a welcome sight, so Scott Smith and Calum Clunie are bringing the winter bulbs they planted into containers late in the summer out into the light. However, the team are mostly focused on protecting the garden from the season’s harsh weather and they’re demonstrating how to ensure your lawn will look great next year.
At 8.00pm (not Wales or Northern Ireland) is a repeat of Monty Don’s American Gardens in which Monty travels the US looking at flowering wildernesses, vegetable plots and green spaces, aiming to discover if there is such a thing as a typical American garden. JANE RACKHAM

DRAMA

The Newsreader

9.00pm (9.30pm Wales; 11.05pm N Ireland) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
Ostensibly, Helen is now the senior anchor on News at Six, but manipulative CEO Charlie obviously preferred her in the sidekick role, the main requirement of which was to personify empathy while veteran broadcaster Geoff spent his time exuding supposed gravitas.
With Geoff gone and Dale in his place, the power balance has shifted, but if Helen dares to bite back in interviews, the higher-ups bristle. Granted, Helen makes an editorial misjudgement in the wake of a shooting in Melbourne. But Charlie is blatantly looking for any excuse to fortify the glass ceiling – though he also seems to take sadistic pleasure in playing his staff off against each other. He really is vile. DAVID BROWN

MUSIC

Abba Night

from 9.00pm BBC4
Catch up via iPlayer
This typically well-curated celebration from our pop-loving pals at BBC4 begins with Agnetha: Abba and After, a revealing 2013 documentary in which Agnetha Faltskog – a reluctant star if ever there was one – reflects upon her remarkable life and career while recording her first album of original material in 26 years. Benny and Bjorn are among those paying tribute. At 10pm is the compilation programme Abba at the BBC, then, at 11pm, Abba in Switzerland, a 1979 TV special featuring guest performances from Kate Bush and Roxy Music. The evening concludes with The Joy of Abba (11.55pm), an excellent documentary analysing their unique artistry and enduring appeal. PAUL WHITELAW

The Good Ship Murder

9.00pm Channel 5

Catch up via My5

A poker tournament makes an ideal milieu for a murder mystery as there are many shared traits – bluffs, high stakes, people with a lot to gain, others with much to lose. So, there's a natural synergy when it comes to this story of untimely death tied to gamblers on a voyage to the Bay of Biscay. The theme also gives entertainments officer Jack Grayling no end of options when it comes to choosing his end-of-episode song.

Just think about it: he could go for The Winner Takes It All, Every 's a Winner, Luck Be a Lady... though perhaps not Ace of Spades. I don't think the cruise ship crowd is quite ready for Shayne Ward's take on Motörhead just yet. DB

SITCOM

Red Dwarf

10.00pm (not Wales) BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

There's a very simple lesson to be learnt in this season two episode: be careful what you wish for. Lister, Rimmer and Cat discover this the hard way when, after calling the competence of Holly (Norman Lovett) into question, they find him replaced by the much scarier, more demanding Queeg 500 (Charles Augins).

He forces the crewmates to clean the decks before food is dispensed, while hologram Rimmer is woken early each morning for an intensive exercise regime. When it comes to artificial intelligence, Queeg is definitely more HAL than Hol – but can the boys from the Dwarf erase this "upgrade" and get their former on-board computer back? DB

COMEDY DRAMA

Breeders

10.00pm Sky Comedy

Catch up via Now

Being in the sandwich generation is starting to bite for Paul (Martin Freeman). Finding his parents needing more support along with his children (and soon to be grandchild) is tough, and it's a fact of life this bittersweet comedy drama has always been so good at accurately – and at times painfully – depicting.

Father-to-be Luke (Oscar Kennedy) is in Paul's office over half term and it's making him think that entering the workplace could be a better option than heading to university, much to his parents' horror. It's also the first day in a new job for Ally (Daisy Haggard), who fears possibly being the oldest in the team. FRANCES TAYLOR

PANEL SHOW

The Last Leg

10.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

It may not always pull in the big guests of The Graham Norton Show or enjoy the cultural cachet of Have I Got News for You, but over the past ten years or so The Last Leg has quietly become a mainstay of Friday-night television.

As the show returns tonight for its 29th series, this feels like a particularly grim time for an upbeat topical talk show. Hosts Adam Hills, Alex Brooker and Josh Widdicombe have form for taking events in their stride, however. Just take the unplanned highlight of last series: an invasion by Just Stop Oil protestors on live TV.

Joining the trio are the slightly less riotous two-punch of comedian Jon Richardson – best known for his bickering double-act with wife Lucy Beaumont – and fellow comic Desiree Burch.

THRILLER The first foray into fully-fledged fright by director Brian De Palma is a masterful Hitch-cocktail of the sinister and the satirical. De Palma established his flashy style in this well-choreographed shocker about journalist Jennifer Salt who's compelled to investigate when she sees her neighbour Margot Kidder appear to commit murder. To some extent a modified version of Psycho dealing with duality and psychosis, this is a well-tuned cinematic frenzy complete with red herrings, a fantasy sequence and stylish split-screen suspense. ALAN JONES (US 1973, violence, swearing, nudity)

Pork Chop Hill ★★★★★

WAR This is the definitive Korean War movie. Bleak and grim, it boasts a superb cast headed by Gregory Peck at his glummiest. Watch out for the young Martin Landau and Harry Dean Stanton amid all the shrapnel. As with director Lewis Milestone's other war films (All Quiet on the Western Front), the action sequences are terrific. TONY SLOMAN (US 1959, violence, BW, HD)

ADVENTURE This sequel to King Solomon's Mines again has Richard Chamberlain and Sharon Stone seeking treasure. If the first film ripped off Raiders of the Lost Ark, this is like Romancing the Stone. Lazy direction and cheap special effects make it a bit of a struggle – it's no surprise a planned third film never happened. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1987, some violence, swearing)

Paths of Glory ★★★★★

DRAMA Winston Churchill claimed this Stanley Kubrick film came closest to capturing the atmosphere of the First World War and exposing the workings of the military mind. Kirk Douglas is outstanding as the colonel who is ordered by Adolphe Menjou's craven general into conducting a hopeless attack on the German position. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1957, violence, BW)

Escape Room: Tournament of Champions ★★★

15

THRILLER This entertaining sequel to the 2019 "locked-room" horror returns with more elaborate traps. Two survivors from the first film (Taylor Russell and Logan Miller) find themselves ensnared in another maze of advanced escape rooms created by a mystery organisation. Hazards this time include lasers, acid rain and quicksand. ALAN JONES (US 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

The Expendables 2 ★★★★★
9.00-11.00pm Sky Max

ACTION With Simon West (Con Air) at the helm, this is a fun roller-coaster ride. A well-cast Jean-Claude Van Damme plays the villain (called Jean Vilain) who plans to change the balance of world power by selling plutonium to the highest bidder. The nonstop mayhem includes cartoonish battles, geysers of CGI blood and seemingly impossible stunts. AJ (US 2012, violence, HD)

HORROR It's a rare showing for this enjoyable story of violent vermin, in which office boy Bruce Davison turns the tables on his tormentors by training his two pet rats and their sewer pals to attack on command. But when he neglects them after falling in love with Sondra Locke, hell hath no fury like rodents scorned. Solid direction by Daniel Mann and Davison's creepy performance turned this into a box-office hit. AJ (US 1971, violence)

FANTASY Guillermo del Toro uses his extraordinarily rich visual style to weave fantasy horror through political allegory with this dark fable. In 1944, in the aftermath of the Spanish Civil War, young Ofelia (Ivana Baquero) seeks refuge in a mysterious maze to escape the harsh realities of her life and is set three perilous tasks by the satyr Pan (Doug Jones). This packs a real emotional punch. AJ (Sp/Mex/US 2006, violence, swearing, HD)

ACTION Eddie Murphy made his exhilarating debut in this "buddy" cop movie, playing the con who is sprung from prison by cop Nick Nolte in an attempt to track down psychopaths James Remar and Sonny Landham. Murphy's taming of a redneck bar deserves special mention and director Walter Hill more than delivers the goods in the action stakes. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1982, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Archive on 4: Joni Mitchell – Verbatim
Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

WHEN JONI MITCHELL suffered a brain aneurysm in March 2015 that initially left her unable to walk or speak, few predicted that she would be enjoying a creative renaissance on the cusp of her 80th birthday. Yet 2023 has been quite a year for the legendary Canadian singer/songwriter.

In July, much recovered, she released a live recording of her appearance the previous summer at the Newport Folk Festival, in which she had stunned the music world by performing in public for the first time in 20 years. Appearing alongside Brandi Carlile, Marcus Mumford and many other friends, Mitchell played guitar and sang on several classic compositions, including Big Yellow Taxi and Both Sides Now. Earlier this year she performed live again, while a box set of her groundbreaking 1970s work has also just been released.

Turning 80 on 7 November, Mitchell is experiencing a remarkable third act. Radio 4's Archive on 4: Joni Mitchell – Verbatim explores a rich and fascinating life via her own words and music, using rare archive audio material that spans her first radio interview in 1964 to more informal chats from the 2020s.

"It was very labour intensive," says producer Des Shaw. "A team worked on this for a long time, going through various archives, interviews that record companies have done over the years, going way back to the first interview she did in the 60s. We spent a lot of time with BBC archivists trying to find little nuggets that haven't been heard. It's a team of people going through all the interviews, and then matching the songs to the relevant ones."

THOUGH MITCHELL WASN'T directly involved in the programme, she makes an entertaining and erudite tour guide. Her childhood in remote Saskatchewan is vividly painted, defined by a serious bout of polio. Treated in an isolation ward presided over by "rustling nuns", she "had a terrible longing to go home". She later fell hard for the Beatles: "Everybody was waiting for the Messiah – and everybody knows that they were the Messiah!"

Pre-fame, she gave up a baby daughter for adoption, a wrenching episode recounted in the song Little Green. Scoring worldwide acclaim with her 1971 album, Blue, she "dropped out" to a remote cottage in British Columbia. "I thought fame was going to be a horrible experience – and it was. I hated it. Hated it."

"The Verbatim format gives listeners an opportunity to hear the way artists have changed throughout the decades", says Shaw. "You get to hear Joni when she's very young, talking about how she doesn't know how long she's going to be around or how this whole thing is going to work out. By the end, she's very aware of her legacy and how much she's achieved."

Despite her achievements, Mitchell is arguably underappreciated. While promoting his new book, The Masters, Jann Wenner, the founding editor of Rolling Stone magazine, recently claimed that Mitchell "was not a philosopher of rock and roll" and was thus excluded from his canon of greats.

In truth, there have been few more influential musicians. Blue remains the ultimate singer/songwriter album, while her complex guitar tunings and experimentations with jazz-fusion, pop and orchestral music show an artist unwilling to settle. In the programme she talks about being discovered in 1967 by the late David Crosby, who became her lover and producer and was a lifelong advocate for her talents. "In a hundred years they'll look back and say, 'Who was the best writer?', and I think it will be Joni", Crosby told me in 2013. "She's as good a poet as Bob Dylan, and a way better musician."

Today, you can hear her influence everywhere. Fans include Haim, Lana Del Rey, Sam Smith and Taylor Swift, who at one point was mooted to play Mitchell in a film biopic. "A new generation of songwriters discover her every decade, while new listeners are getting into her music all the time", says Shaw. Very much a case of 80 not out. GRAEME THOMSON

"Perhaps never is there a painting that is more overlaid with the image of the tragic romantic artist tortured by his demons," says Barnaby Wright from London's Courtauld Gallery, home to Vincent van Gogh's Self-Portrait with Bandaged Ear (pictured left). Series presenter and producer Cathy FitzGerald encourages us to think about famous paintings in a new way as she speaks with experts, while offering insights into the life of the artists at the time. In Van Gogh's case, his mental health was not great when he painted this in January 1889 (he was to take his own life 18 months later), but FitzGerald finds glimmers of hope in those bold brushstrokes.

Understand: Israel and the Palestinians/The Mandates

Nine days after Hamas entered southern Israel and carried out a horrific mass killing of Jews, Radio 4 quickly aired Understand: Israel and the Palestinians fronted by the BBC's Europe editor Katya Adler. It's an essential guide for anyone seeking to understand the roots of today's convulsions, and it tells the story with calmness and authority. For a more detailed history of Palestine and Israel from the Balfour Declaration in 1917 to the creation of the state of Israel in 1948 check out The Mandates, presented by the BBC's Middle East correspondent Tom Bateman. To say the scheduling of the first episode was prescient is an understatement – it began five days before the Hamas atrocities. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio Diaries

The Radio Diaries team is a prime example of citizen journalism at its best. They have given people recording devices since 1996 and collated some truly extraordinary stories of ordinary life. This latest series, part of their history collection, is called The Unmarked Graveyard: Stories from Hart Island, and untangles the lives of those buried in numbered graves (no headstones or plaques) in the largest public cemetery in America, off the coast of New York City. Fascinating, but also rather sad. AJ

The Gun Machine

The United States' relationship with the gun has been tortuous for centuries, with the Second Amendment to the Constitution that allows citizens to bear arms considered sacrosanct by a gun lobby opposed to state control. But as journalist and gun nerd Alain Stephens reveals, innovations – larger magazines, the Colt 45 – have often been driven as much by government demand as private industry. Lucid and detailed, his analysis leaves you in no doubt as to why the US is still “the arsenal to the world”. JEREMY ASPINALL

With conversations moving from the mundane to the profound – sometimes in the same show – you never quite know what you’re going to get. MARK GLASBY

Peter Mandelson arrives as a backseat driver

THE TIMES is beating its drum for new podcast How to Win an Election, which arrives on 31 October and will see columnist Daniel Finkelstein, policy expert Polly Mackenzie and he-who-speaks-as-though-calming-a-raven Peter Mandelson meet once a week to discuss the ins and outs of the next general election.

However, even a fanfare from this column is as naught when set against the true currency of all political podcasts, which is the hope that one of the participants will use it to administer a dig in the ribs to the people they used to call colleagues. That’s surely what host Matt Chorley will be hoping for.

All three displayed their tribal scars in a pre-launch limbering-up session. Mackenzie, who worked for Charles Kennedy and Menzies Campbell on the Liberal pact with the Conservatives, said our electoral system was a disgrace. Finkelstein, whose advice didn’t help John Major get elected, reckoned all Starmer has to do is stay off the bacon sandwiches. Mandelson, meanwhile, warned against the Labour habit of getting stuck into the reception without first ensuring the register has been actually signed.

TIMES RADIO BOSSES describe this as “a huge new audio investment”, so the contributors are all presumably being compensated. But the sums involved will be nothing compared to the opportunities afforded for the retired combatant who still fancies themselves as a backseat driver.

For the politician who can no longer abide the day-to-day of being in a political party but still likes the sound of their own voice (Rory Stewart, Ed Balls, George Osborne and an untold number in their sheds with two cocoa tins and a piece of string) podcasting is a congenial way of passing the increasing amount of time they seem to spend away from the front line.

Mandelson concedes that not all lessons learnt in earlier elections will be applicable. “The state of the country is completely different and how to win an election has moved on too. We all need re-birthing, myself included.”

TODAY'S CHOICES

World of Wisdom

7.30pm BBC World Service
There are some terrific episodes in this series on BBC Sounds, covering topics such as overcoming feelings of guilt when a loved one takes their own life or opening up to people again once Covid restrictions were lifted. Without being judgemental, this edition seems lightweight in comparison – a young woman seeking advice on finding a life partner who gets some very black-and-white tips from a spiritual adviser along the lines of all our responses stem from either a place of love or fear. Fabulous series, not the best episode. ANNA JONES

Turning Point: The Fall

3.00pm Radio 4
The feverish months leading up to the fall of the Berlin Wall in November 1989 unfold like a comedy of errors in this telling dramatisation of a major watershed. Despite dictator Erich Honecker proclaiming the German Democratic Republic would last for centuries, within weeks he had been deposed and that stark symbol of Cold War division would be obsolete and turned to rubble. But who knew a dyspeptic bureaucrat at a routine press conference, mistakenly announcing the heavily guarded checkpoints were open, would sound its death knell. JEREMY ASPINALL

6.00 Opera on 3

A performance of Wagner's Parsifal from July at the Bayreuth Festival, in a new production by Jay Scheib, which used virtual reality glasses to controversial effect. Wagner's great final "music drama" was the only work written expressly for the acoustics of his theatre in Bayreuth in Bavaria and the score abounds in the blended sonorities and rich harmonies of Wagner's late style. The work – which he deemed a "Bühnenweihfestspiel" (sacred festival stage play) – premiered on 26 July 1882, seven months before his death. Presented by Martin Handley, who is joined by Wagner specialist Chris Walton.

Love Stories: The Betrothed

3.00pm Radio 4
Alessandro Manzoni's 200-year old novel has never been out of print in Italy, where every schoolchild still reads it. This dramatisation by Eileen Horne makes it clear why the story has taken such a hold. It's a true romance set in a time of foreign occupation, when the northern Italian territory of Lombardy is controlled by Spain and innocent young lovers Renzo and Lucia face an obstacle to their proposed marriage in the form of Don Rodrigo, a powerful Spanish nobleman who plans to have Lucia to himself. In this first of two episodes, Lucia is sent to a convent for her safety while Renzo battles through violent social unrest and bread riots on his quest to defend the honour of his betrothed. The constantly shifting threat to the hapless pair makes for some gripping storytelling. FIONA HUGHES

12 noon Radio 3
When Zanzibar-born Abdulrazak Gurnah received a phone call in 2021 at his home in Canterbury, telling him he had won the Nobel Prize for Literature, he thought it was a hoax. Most of his ten novels had been well received, but they hadn't sold many copies. That's all changed since his Nobel success. An 18-year-old asylum seeker from the violent revolution that followed the expulsion of the British from Zanzibar in 1963, Gurnah often writes about refugees. Talking to Michael Berkeley, he discusses his status and that of others ("There's got to be calmer thinking about who needs assistance"). His favourite music includes works by Shostakovich and the Malian kora player Toumani Diabaté. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

2.00 The Early Music Show In 1558, two years after having abdicated in favour of his son Philip II and having retired to the Monastery of Yuste in Spain, Holy Roman Emperor Charles V organised a fake ceremony for his own funeral. Did he want to be the first man to witness such a moving and solemn moment? Or was it just a rehearsal to control the smooth running of the service and its theatricality? He died a few weeks later, and this time for real. Lucie Skeaping presents the ensemble La Tempete and friends in a concert given in August at the Utrecht Early Music Festival, which imagines some of the music that may have been heard at this macabre event. Plus the weekly feature Early Music News with Mark Seow.

5.30 Words and Music

As part of Radio 3's season of programmes marking Wednesday's 400th anniversary of the publication of Shakespeare's First Folio, a playlist inspired by a whole series of Shakespeare plays and sonnets set alongside key speeches from those dramas. Reuben Joseph (the most recent Macbeth for the Royal Shakespeare Company) and Tracy-Ann Oberman introduce archive performances and new recordings. With music by Shostakovich, Debussy, William Walton, Amy Beach and Duke Ellington. Producer Les Pratt 6.45 Sunday Feature: Shakespeare's Rival Robert Greene (1558-92) was the hot young name on the writing scene in Elizabethan days. With his university education and his friendship with Christopher Marlowe and Thomas Nashe, he was the man to watch. He'd written plays for the Queen's Men and was a bestseller, as much as you could be in an age before copyright or royalties. But after his death in 1592, at 34, his reputation faded, and he became known mostly for calling Shakespeare an "upstart crow". How did Greene get it so wrong? Or did he not? Professor Nandini Das tells his story.

7.30 Drama on 3: Hamlette

In the final work in Radio 3's three-play series Inspired by Hamlet, Shakespeare's timeless tragedy is given a radical reimagining by Tamsin Oglesby. Rising political star Harriet is consumed by the question of how to avenge the rape of her sister.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Journey of a Lifetime

8.00pm Radio 4

French-Algerian journalist Chahrazade Douah tells a bittersweet story of "heaven and hell at the other end of the world". The French territory of New Caledonia is a beautiful archipelago in the Pacific. But in the late 19th century the French occupying force in Algeria deported insurgents to a penal colony there. Inspired by her grandmother and sponsored by the Royal Geographical Society, Douah undertakes an arduous, 17,000km journey to the land of her ancestors. She hears the story of one exile who managed to escape back to Algeria, and locates the great-great-grandson of another, Kiki (above, with pictures of his mother, who first heard the full story of his ancestors). The Algerian community in New Caledonia still maintains its old customs, and Douah witnesses a unique ceremony halfway between storytelling and a haka from "nearby" New Zealand.

DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Battle Grounds: Culture Wars in the Countryside

1.45pm Radio 4

Anna Jones reckons William Blake had it all wrong. Far from the British countryside being a "green and pleasant land", she sees it as a place riven by conflict. In this series she examines issues from veganism to right-to-roam. She grew up on a farm and has had a 20-year career as a rural affairs correspondent so knows her stuff, but limits herself to individuals' stories. You'll understand her approach from the first episode, when she talks to a vegan – who also happens to be a dairy farmer. Equally strong are the policeman trying to prosecute bird-of-prey crime and her interview with a farmer wanting dog walkers off his land. DAVID CRAWFORD

12.00 Composer of the Week: Hector Berlioz (1803–1869) and Shakespeare 1/5. A Passion for Stories. Hector Berlioz burst onto the musical stage of 19th-century Paris, determined to break the mould of France's elegant and refined classical style with music that could be bombastic, barbaric and grotesque, as well as sentimental, scintillating and sorrowful. In addition to fellow musicians he was inspired by writers, notably Virgil, Scott, Goethe and, especially, Shakespeare. This week Donald Macleod traces the tangled literary connections in Berlioz's life and music, including the profound spell cast by Shakespeare, who features in Radio 3 programmes throughout Wednesday. Symphonie fantastique (4th mvt Marche au supplice) Chicago SO, conductor Claudio Abbado

10.45 The Essay: On Disappointment

1/5. Creative. Sheffield-born journalist and writer Rachel Cooke believes life is full of let-downs, and across five essays she takes a wry and wide-ranging look at disappointment. She begins by examining the artistic kind, revealing how attempts by artist Benjamin Haydon (1786–1846) to stage a grand exhibition were thwarted by the far more popular General Tom Thumb (Charles Stratton). Producer Nicola Holloway

TODAY'S CHOICES

In the Studio

11.30am/11.30pm
BBC World Service

This week's guest is the talented film-maker Carol Morley (above), the director behind The Alcohol Years, Dreams of a Life and The Falling. In an interview about her 2016 semi-autobiographical debut novel 7 Miles Out, Morley explained how she sees films as "rescuing memories and stories before we forget them all". In the case of her novel, which she hopes to adapt for a film, this had personal resonance, as the book is about a young girl's response to her father's suicide, an experience Morley had to find her own way through. ANNA JONES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
Shostakovich survived in the USSR by subterfuge. Take his 11th Symphony, officially written to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution. Yet, by giving its movements descriptive titles that evoke instead the massacre of defenceless protesters by Tsarist troops on Bloody Sunday 1905, he successfully slipped a more universal message of protest against all state oppression beneath the Soviet censors' radar. It's performed tonight by the Liverpool Phil under its Leningrad-born conductor laureate, Vasily Petrenko. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

Being Roman with Mary Beard

11.30am Radio 4

Instead of sweaty gladiators and toga-clad senators, Mary Beard (above) opts to use the lives of six disparate citizens – from a slave to an emperor – to build a vivid picture of the Roman Empire. The focus of the first episode is Emperor Marcus Aurelius (AD 161–180), a Stoic philosopher whose Meditations remains a bestseller even today, while movies The Fall of the Roman Empire and Gladiator have created a popular portrait of the man as a wise, calm and incorruptible leader in contrast to “usual monsters” Nero and Caligula. However, thanks to rediscovered letters between the teenage Marcus and his beloved tutor, Fronto, a spontaneous, emotionally charged character emerges, who not only learnt how to farm and make wine, but also developed a crush on his mentor. JEREMY ASPINALL

Shakespeare Day

From 6.30am Radio 3

Given the sheer range of Shakespeare-inspired music written since the publication of the First Folio, the selection for today's Shakespeare Day rather disappointingly ranges from the predictable – Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream music (Afternoon Concert) and Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet ballet (In Concert) – to the preposterous, with neither Beethoven's “Ghost” Trio nor “Tempest” Sonata (Lunchtime Concert) having anything directly to do with the Bard apart from their apocryphal nicknames. At least the ever-dependable Donald Macleod is on surer ground with his Composer of the Week focus on Berlioz: no composer has ever been more Shakespeare-obsessed, even marrying his very own Ophelia. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

Great Lives

9.00pm Radio 4 Extra

Between them, voices from the present and the past create a vivid word picture of the bibulous but brilliant Welsh poet Dylan Thomas (above), who is approaching a double anniversary. Born in 1914, he died aged only 39 in 1953. Welsh poet Owen Sheers and Damian Walford Davies (then of Aberystwyth University) really know their subject. We also hear Thomas's wife, Caitlin Macnamara, and his BBC producer. We hear Thomas's own voice – because of elocution surprisingly English – and of course his words, spoken so indelibly in BBC radio's Under Milk Wood by Richard Burton. Thomas played up to his audience's image of him as a wild boy. But why exactly did he die so young? This is dealt with as well. A scintillating episode, first heard in 2012. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Open Country

3.00pm Radio 4

Incident rates on Britain's mountains are soaring, as more of us seek adventure and the perfect shot for social media. In the Lake District, the Wasdale mountain rescue team have recorded their busiest year to date, while the nearby Langdale Ambleside volunteers have already hit their average annual incident rate two months early. Helen Mark travels to this spectacular landscape to ask whether these men and women sacrificing their free time can cope with the ever increasing number of call-outs. Along the way, she learns some of the procedures that keep the volunteers safe when helping others, and hears their common sense tips for members of the public navigating these enticing but treacherous fells. TOM GOULDING

TODAY'S CHOICES

Mark Steel's in Town

11.30am Radio 4

It was last month that Radio 4 comedy stalwart Mark Steel (above) revealed that he was being treated for throat cancer, his enforced absence from The News Quiz – leading someone at Radio 4 to decide that it's the right moment to treat us to a re-run of one of his Mark Steel's in Town series, and well done them. Steel is in his element in every sense because he starts in his home town of Brighton – the programme recorded on the beach during the 2020 lockdown, with Steel risking a joke about having a bit of a cough. Among the guests who enter into the spirit of the occasion is local MP Caroline Lucas, and the whole thing is a gloriously affectionate send-up of this most non-conformist of locales. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

The London Jazz Festival's opening gala at the Royal Festival Hall is an annual celebration of vocal prowess and songwriting. This year sees talents like Emeli Sandé, Clarke Peters, China Moses, Omar, Brendan Reilly, Naomi Banks, Judi Jackson and Vanessa Haynes joining forces with Guy Barker's specially formed London Jazz Festival Orchestra. Radio 3 joins live and in the interval there's a mixtape honouring centenarians Wes Montgomery, Fats Navarro, Dexter Gordon, Philly Joe Jones and Johnny Hartman. Later at 11pm, J to Z Late broadcasts the festival's launch party, which includes a number of surprise guests including a New Orleans legend. It fanfares a week of jazz-inflected programming on Radio 3, including John and Alice Coltrane as Composers of the Week. DAVID CRAWFORD

RT Live from the Royal Festival Hall, the Jazz Voice Festival Opening Gala of this year's London Jazz Festival. The annual Jazz Voice evening celebrates singers and songwriting, with featured artists tonight including Emeli Sandé, Clarke Peters, China Moses, Omar, Brendan Reilly, Naomi Banks, Judi Jackson and Vanessa Haynes. Guy Barker directs the specially created London Jazz Festival Orchestra in this event which is hosted on stage by Jumoké Fashola. During the interval there's a mixtape of recordings by innovative jazz giants all born in 1923, including guitarist Wes Montgomery, trumpeter Fats Navarro, tenorist Dexter Gordon, drummer Philly Joe Jones and, in keeping with tonight's event, vocalist Johnny Hartman (from his 1963 collaboration with John Coltrane).

10.00 The Verb

Ian McMillan celebrates what Shakespeare can tell future generations – about animals, sound, performance and language. He's joined by actor Paterson Joseph, grime poet and writer Debris Stevenson, The Verb regular Kate Fox and Professor Todd Borlick (of the University of Huddersfield).

10.45 The Essay: On Disappointment

5/5. Travel. In her final essay, Rachel Cooke confesses to being disappointed during what she thought was going to be a trip of a lifetime, and now wonders whether that says more about her or about the holiday. She asks what it is that makes the perfect holiday and whether unglamorous locations might be the answer.

11.00 J to Z Late

Radio 3's Saturday jazz show J to Z returns to Pizza Express Live in Holborn in London for the raucous opening night launch party of the London Jazz Festival. Recorded earlier this evening and hosted by Jumoké Fashola and featuring Radio 1Xtra's CassKidd, the event includes a stellar line-up drawn from across the spectrum of jazz, including rising star pianist Sultan Stevenson and surprise guests, among them a New Orleans giant.

Edward Heath took up sailing at the age of 50, and his midlife career as a sailor developed with extraordinary speed – he bought his first yacht Morning Cloud in 1969 and won the Sydney to Hobart Yacht Race later that year. He then captained Britain's winning team for the Admiral's Cup in 1971, while prime minister. Professor David Cannadine considers how Heath's passion for sailing also reflects something of the extraordinary isolation of his personality. For details see Monday. Repeated 12.30am. Face behind the voice Gavin Richards Cambridge 105 Radio

Age 47
Current job
Presenter of Cambridge 105
Radio's Saturday
show (10am), plus
The Community

Show on Burwell Radio (Sunday, 6pm) and Ely Radio (Monday, 8pm).
CV Born and brought up in Derby, he studied music at Cambridge, where he worked on the university's radio station, plus at Ram FM in Derby during the holidays.

After graduating, he became a secondary school music teacher.

"It was lockdown that propelled me back into radio. Burwell Radio and Ely Radio came into being and I started doing The Community Show for them." He took on the Saturday morning show for Cambridge 105 this summer.

Tell us about the community radio stations you work with

"We're all volunteers, no one gets paid! People are just passionate about local radio and they enjoy doing it. Cambridge 105 Radio has studio facilities in the centre of the city, but for Burwell Radio and Ely Radio, we stream live or pre-record our shows from home.

"Daytime is largely music and interviews about community and charity events. We have a core playlist – anything from the 80s onwards, with the emphasis on current music – we don't put on Wagner for two hours! Evening programmes serve different interests – Polish Waves, an LGBTQ show and specialist music programmes.

For my show, it's all about getting immersed in what's going on – from a BBC Young Musician of the Year winner who was giving a local concert; to previewing the next Cambridge United football game; and a moving interview with a man whose son has terminal cancer and was fund-raising for his charity."

Best moments "Getting involved in live events, you see first-hand the benefits of local radio. Community radio is a place for personal engagement – at an event recently, a gentleman asked me to play a song which reminded him of his wife, who had recently passed away."

Worst moments "Trying to do my first broadcast for Burwell Radio during lockdown. The levels were all wrong, the mike kept dropping out... In the words of Yaz, 'The only way was up!' But we got the hang of it after a few weeks."

First radio memory "When I was growing up, local radio in the East Midlands was amazing. Also seeing the Radio 1 Roadshow. And taping the Top 40 with Bruno Brookes – pretending I was presenting it!"

Favourite broadcasters "I love a wide range of radio, including Classic FM and Radio 2. The Radio 2 crowd of ten years ago were pretty much top of the game – Chris Evans, Ken Bruce, Simon Mayo, Steve Wright, Jo Whiley. I also enjoy Radio 3's Through the Night on catch-up – it's very relaxing. Georgia Mann is a really good communicator." Secret skills "When I was 16 or 17, I won a national piano competition at the Royal Academy of Music – my prize was presented by Princess Diana!" CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice Gavin Richards Cambridge 105 Radio

Age 47
Current job
Presenter of Cambridge 105
Radio's Saturday
show (10am), plus
The Community

Show on Burwell Radio (Sunday, 6pm) and Ely Radio (Monday, 8pm).
CV Born and brought up in Derby, he studied music at Cambridge, where he worked on the university's radio station, plus at Ram FM in Derby during the holidays.

After graduating, he became a secondary school music teacher.

"It was lockdown that propelled me back into radio. Burwell Radio and Ely Radio came into being and I started doing The Community Show for them." He took on the Saturday morning show for Cambridge 105 this summer.

Tell us about the community radio stations you work with

"We're all volunteers, no one gets paid! People are just passionate about local radio and they enjoy doing it. Cambridge 105 Radio has studio facilities in the centre of the city, but for Burwell Radio and Ely Radio, we stream live or pre-record our shows from home.

"Daytime is largely music and interviews about community and charity events. We have a core playlist – anything from the 80s onwards, with the emphasis on current music – we don't put on Wagner for two hours! Evening programmes serve different interests – Polish Waves, an LGBTQ show and specialist music programmes.

For my show, it's all about getting immersed in what's going on – from a BBC Young Musician of the Year winner who was giving a local concert; to previewing the next Cambridge United football game; and a moving interview with a man whose son has terminal cancer and was fund-raising for his charity."

Best moments "Getting involved in live events, you see first-hand the benefits of local radio. Community radio is a place for personal engagement – at an event recently, a gentleman asked me to play a song which reminded him of his wife, who had recently passed away."

Worst moments "Trying to do my first broadcast for Burwell Radio during lockdown. The levels were all wrong, the mike kept dropping out... In the words of Yazz, 'The only way was up!' But we got the hang of it after a few weeks."

First radio memory "When I was growing up, local radio in the East Midlands was amazing. Also seeing the Radio 1 Roadshow. And taping the Top 40 with Bruno Brookes – pretending I was presenting it!"

Favourite broadcasters "I love a wide range of radio, including Classic FM and Radio 2. The Radio 2 crowd of ten years ago were pretty much top of the game – Chris Evans, Ken Bruce, Simon Mayo, Steve Wright, Jo Whiley. I also enjoy Radio 3's Through the Night on catch-up – it's very relaxing. Georgia Mann is a really good communicator." Secret skills "When I was 16 or 17, I won a national piano competition at the Royal Academy of Music – my prize was presented by Princess Diana!" CAROLINE MEYER

Age 47
Current job
Presenter of Cambridge 105
Radio's Saturday
show (10am), plus

Show on Burwell Radio (Sunday, 6pm) and Ely Radio (Monday, 8pm).
CV Born and brought up in Derby, he studied music at Cambridge, where he worked on the university's radio station, plus at Ram FM in Derby during the holidays. After graduating, he became a secondary school music teacher. "It was lockdown that propelled me back into radio. Burwell Radio and Ely Radio came into being and I started doing The Community Show for them." He took on the Saturday morning show for Cambridge 105 this summer.
Tell us about the community radio stations you work with "We're all volunteers, no one gets paid! People are just passionate about local radio and they enjoy doing it. Cambridge 105 Radio has studio facilities in the centre of the city, but for Burwell Radio and Ely Radio, we stream live or pre-record our shows from home.

"Daytime is largely music and interviews about community and charity events. We have a core playlist – anything from the 80s onwards, with the emphasis on current music – we don't put on Wagner for two hours! Evening programmes serve different interests – Polish Waves, an LGBTQ show and specialist music programmes.

For my show, it's all about getting immersed in what's going on – from a BBC Young Musician of the Year winner who was giving a local concert; to previewing the next Cambridge United football game; and a moving interview with a man whose son has terminal cancer and was fund-raising for his charity."

Best moments "Getting involved in live events, you see first-hand the benefits of local radio. Community radio is a place for personal engagement – at an event recently, a gentleman asked me to play a song which reminded him of his wife, who had recently passed away."

Worst moments "Trying to do my first broadcast for Burwell Radio during lockdown. The levels were all wrong, the mike kept dropping out... In the words of Yazz, 'The only way was up!' But we got the hang of it after a few weeks."

First radio memory "When I was growing up, local radio in the East Midlands was amazing. Also seeing the Radio 1 Roadshow. And taping the Top 40 with Bruno Brookes – pretending I was presenting it!"

Favourite broadcasters "I love a wide range of radio, including Classic FM and Radio 2. The Radio 2 crowd of ten years ago were pretty much top of the game – Chris Evans, Ken Bruce, Simon Mayo, Steve Wright, Jo Whiley. I also enjoy Radio 3's Through the Night on catch-up – it's very relaxing. Georgia Mann is a really good communicator." Secret skills "When I was 16 or 17, I won a national piano competition at the Royal Academy of Music – my prize was presented by Princess Diana!" CAROLINE MEYER

Age 47
Current job
Presenter of Cambridge 105
Radio's Saturday
show (10am), plus

Show on Burwell Radio (Sunday, 6pm) and Ely Radio (Monday, 8pm).
CV Born and brought up in Derby, he studied music at Cambridge, where he worked on the university's radio station, plus at Ram FM in Derby during the holidays. After graduating, he became a secondary school music teacher. "It was lockdown that propelled me back into radio. Burwell Radio and Ely Radio came into being and I started doing The Community Show for them." He took on the Saturday morning show for Cambridge 105 this summer.
Tell us about the community radio stations you work with "We're all volunteers, no one gets paid! People are just passionate about local radio and they enjoy doing it. Cambridge 105 Radio has studio facilities in the centre of the city, but for Burwell Radio and Ely Radio, we stream live or pre-record our shows from home.

"Daytime is largely music and interviews about community and charity events. We have a core playlist – anything from the 80s onwards, with the emphasis on current music – we don't put on Wagner for two hours! Evening programmes serve different interests – Polish Waves, an LGBTQ show and specialist music programmes.

For my show, it's all about getting immersed in what's going on – from a BBC Young Musician of the Year winner who was giving a local concert; to previewing the next Cambridge United football game; and a moving interview with a man whose son has terminal cancer and was fund-raising for his charity."

Best moments "Getting involved in live events, you see first-hand the benefits of local radio. Community radio is a place for personal engagement – at an event recently, a gentleman asked me to play a song which reminded him of his wife, who had recently passed away."

Worst moments "Trying to do my first broadcast for Burwell Radio during lockdown. The levels were all wrong, the mike kept dropping out... In the words of Yazz, 'The only way was up!' But we got the hang of it after a few weeks."

First radio memory "When I was growing up, local radio in the East Midlands was amazing. Also seeing the Radio 1 Roadshow. And taping the Top 40 with Bruno Brookes – pretending I was presenting it!"

Favourite broadcasters "I love a wide range of radio, including Classic FM and Radio 2. The Radio 2 crowd of ten years ago were pretty much top of the game – Chris Evans, Ken Bruce, Simon Mayo, Steve Wright, Jo Whiley. I also enjoy Radio 3's Through the Night on catch-up – it's very relaxing. Georgia Mann is a really good communicator." Secret skills "When I was 16 or 17, I won a national piano competition at the Royal Academy of Music – my prize was presented by Princess Diana!" CAROLINE MEYER

Are you one of the 6 million over 65s struggling with the internet? We can help...

Age UK analysis reveals nearly half of over 65s struggle with the internet*.

But it can all be so much easier – find out how... *Age UK analysis of data from Lloyds Bank. Nov 2022

Modern mobile phones (smartphones) can do so much more than just make phone calls – they can help you get online and stop you getting left behind.

Are they doing it on purpose?

It's like they're trying to leave you behind. Renewing car tax, booking GP appointments, ordering prescriptions, banking – they all seem to assume that everyone's online and everyone has a smartphone.

But it's not that simple.

It's not enough to have a smartphone – you need to be able to use it too. But using them isn't always easy – and that's putting it mildly!

Whether you have problems with the basics or you're trying to do something slightly more advanced, it can be easy, once you know how. But until you've been shown, it can be like talking a different language.

That's why we published these books: Smartphones One Step at a Time – with separate versions for iPhones, Android phones and Doro smartphones.

Plain English... and that's not all

These books explain how to use the phone in plain simple language, with pictures of the screen showing you exactly where to tap. No jargon!

Only Half the Story...

That's only half the story, but I don't have room to explain what I mean by that here. So I've put together full information about the books – who they're for, what they cover and so on.

What's more, the books also come with a small free gift – no room to explain that here, either!

"Should come with every smartphone"

Here's what one reader said:

"Thanks for a fantastic smart phone book. Very pleasant staff as usual."

I think this book should be sold with every smart phone. I have learnt so much from it, the info you get with the phone is non-existent."

Don't buy now, do this instead:

These books aren't available in the shops or on Amazon. Instead, you can find out the full details about them: what's covered, who they're suitable for and what you might be missing out on, then decide.

Just ask for a free information pack now. Discover what the books will do for you and about the free gift. (And don't worry, we won't share your details with anyone else.)

Ring 01229 777606 and speak to Shanice, Shannon or Emma (lines open Monday to Friday 8.30am-5.30pm). Or email your name and address to: RT1023@helpfulbooks.co.uk Or use the coupon below.

There's no obligation, no cost. You have nothing to lose so why not do it now, while you think of it?

I'M WAITING in the wings, with a knife, ready for Brian Cox to slip up," says Dr Maggie Aderin-Pocock. The Sky at Night presenter is joking, I think (she laughs as she says it, and it's more of a good-natured guffaw than maniacal cackle), but adds, "He is a rival, though, I suppose. I'd be lying if I said I didn't sometimes see him do programmes and think, 'Oh, I'd like to do that.' As long as he does it well, though, I'm happy. Because – and this is going to sound very magnanimous of me – the fundamental thing is that the science gets out there."

Getting the science out there is certainly something Aderin-Pocock is passionate about. Her voice grows giddy when she talks about, say, spotting Jupiter in the night sky: "Photons of light from the Sun have travelled over a billion kilometres to reflect off Jupiter and then land in your eye!" And she quotes with relish the physicist Richard Feynman and his declaration that a flower becomes even more beautiful once you understand photosynthesis. (It's the same with celestial bodies, she insists.)

Sure enough, her new book, The Sky at Night: the Art of Stargazing, has a whole, lightly chewy chapter on "The Science of Stars" – along with

'I thought astronomy was only done by white guys in togas'

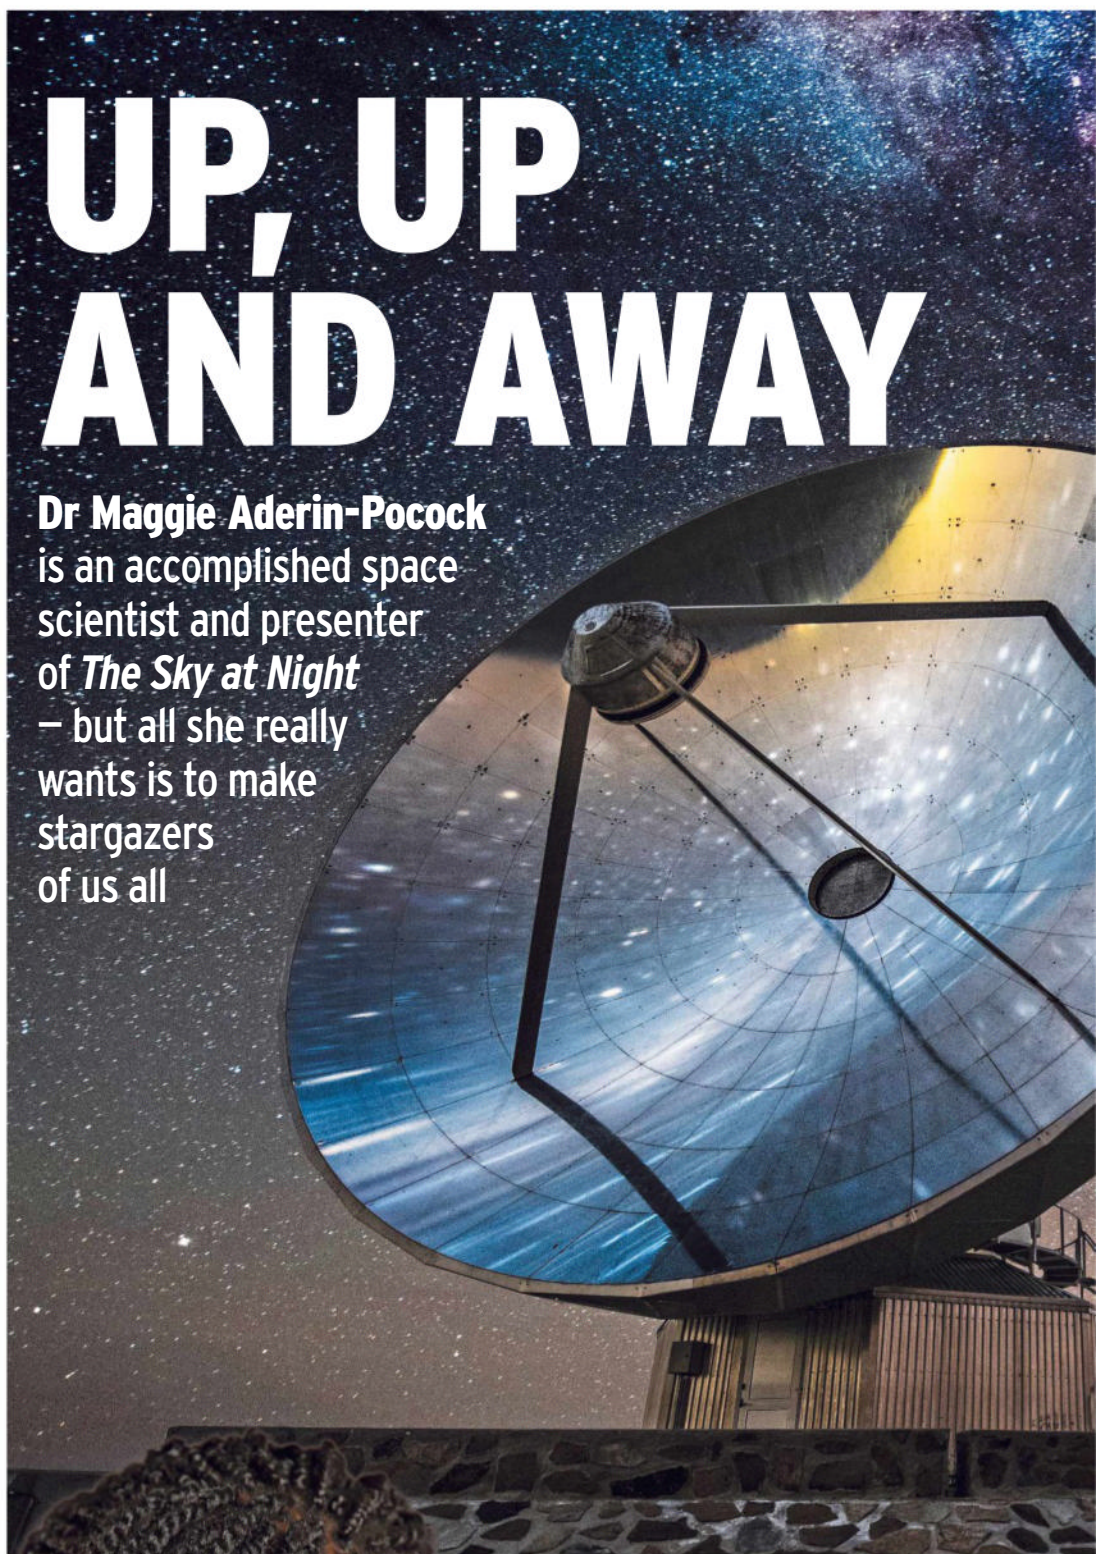

200-odd pages guiding readers/gazers through every constellation from Andromeda to, less romantic-sounding, the Air Pump ("one of my favourites, actually"). The point, explains the 55-year-old, is to make the stars accessible to all. "Growing up, I thought astronomy was only done by white guys in togas. But now I know there's something inside each of us that wants to look up and understand the universe. Its magic is available to everyone – there are even star-maps and photos from the Hubble Telescope rendered in Braille."

She also understands that it's not just about the science. "You don't need to comprehend it all to appreciate it. The universe is vast and amazing, and simply looking out at it gives most people a sense of inner peace." In fact, one of the book's most memorable passages details the feeling of tranquillity the night sky gifted the author in what was a fairly turbulent childhood, living on a London council estate and attending 13 different schools while also coping with undiagnosed dyslexia.

"It was tough," she says. "My parents split up when I was four. I didn't really fit in at school: people would say to me, 'Why don't you go back home?' And my relatives from Nigeria would say, 'You're not Nigerian'. I didn't seem to belong to any world. And space was a refuge because it transcended all that."

Gaining a degree in physics, a PhD and a job working for the MoD on missile warning systems before going on to design instruments for, among others, the £8 billion James Webb Space Telescope, Aderin-Pocock clearly has a brain the size of an exoplanet. So what's she doing on such light entertainment laugh-ins as Would I Lie to You?, House of Games and I Literally Just Told You, Jimmy Carr's Channel 4 quiz show? It's all part of her mission to bring science to the masses, she says.

"How do you get other people excited about space? I don't think this book is going to tackle it, because the sort of people likely to buy it are already interested in the stars. That's why I like to do

A LIFE IN SPACE
From top: Visiting the Very Large Telescope in Chile for The Sky at Night; the Barbie doll of Dr Aderin-Pocock; the James Webb Space Telescope

CLEAR SKIES
As well as the Very Large Telescope, Chile is also home to the La Silla Telescope

all these different TV programmes and – this sounds slightly menacing, doesn't it? – infiltrate the general audience. People have a very set view of what a space scientist looks like – white, male, sort of stiff and grey – and it's nice to break those stereotypes and have people say 'Oh, there's a space scientist and she's having fun with Jimmy Carr!'

COULD IT ALSO be a nice change, I suggest, to switch off the megabrain for a bit. But no, apparently Jimmy Carr is harder work than James Webb: "With the James Webb, it's 1.5 million km away, so you've got time to figure things out. I find the cut and thrust of telly more challenging..."

If it's difficult to picture her Sky at Night predecessor Patrick Moore joshing with the likes of Lee Mack, it's even harder to imagine him being made into a Barbie doll – though that honour befell Aderin-Pocock earlier this year, for International Women's Day. "I think she looks like me on a really good day," says the real thing, though she sounds more moved by her appearance, in puppet form, in the recent Clangers reboot: "I actually cried."

Either way, at least the doll now gives Brian Cox a way to get his own back – might he be sticking pins in one every time Aderin-Pocock gets a gig he wanted? "I have had some odd aches and pains recently that I couldn't explain. Suddenly it all makes sense..." ED GRENBY

WINTER WARMERS

As the seasons shift, these plants will add interest long after the leaves have fallen, says Joe Swift

WE'RE FAST APPROACHING what I would call 'proper winter' – which, let's face it, can drag on in the UK – so any plants that can lift our souls during this period should earn a spot in our gardens. I always make sure I've got a percentage of evergreen and deciduous shrubs that add interest through the dormant months. But, you may ask, don't deciduous ones drop their leaves? Well, yes, they do, but it's what's beneath the leaves we're interested in – and some are particularly stunning when their stems are revealed.

The obvious choice is the dogwood (with stems available in bright red, golden yellow, coral orange, luminous green and mysterious purple-black): they're fabulous for the season, and if you buy them bare-rooted in winter you can get them for under £2 a plant – less than a posh coffee!

Others with notable winter stems include maples, roses, ornamental brambles, bamboos, and controllable willows (coppice dogwoods and willows every year in early spring to keep them manageable, and the new stems will be a strong colour).

At 6m tall, Acer palmatum "Sango-kaku" (coral-bark maple) is more of a small tree than a shrub, but a choice specimen for a sheltered small garden. After its golden foliage drops in winter, the unmissable super-bright coral-pink-red stems hold colour right through to their tips.

Kerria japonica "Pleniflora" is a vase-shaped shrub, reaching around 3m, which produces strong upright stems with bright green leaves. In winter its vivid green stems are its best asset, and it will grow pretty much anywhere. Many bamboos look fabulous through winter, too. They can quickly fill out into a thicket, but if you regularly snip off the lower leaves to around eye level the beautiful canes are easily visible, and the plant looks more majestic. Fargesia "Red Panda" is a great choice: yes, it grows to around 4m in height, but only around 1.5m in spread (perfect for creating privacy) and is well-behaved with it. The upright culms (those hollow stems) start green; as they mature they will turn orange then reddish-brown, so provide plenty of interest.

Rosa sericea pteracantha (winged thorn rose) has to get a name-check, too. This one's a bit of a cheat, as it's the translucent red winged thorns on the stems that look amazing when the light shines through from the back (a factor worth considering when placing), but in the middle of winter it's one of those plants that will get you grabbing for your camera for that arty winter shot!

Joe Swift is a presenter on BBC2's Gardeners' World.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

We're approaching the ideal time to plant a hedge with whips (like sticks with roots!). Costing from around £1.50 each, whips establish quickly.

■ GET THE SPACE RIGHT

For a single-row hedge, try three plants per metre. For a double-row (a thicker hedge), go for five plants per metre (40cm apart, with 40cm between rows, in a staggered formation).

■ WHAT TO CHOOSE

Alder Dark green foliage and brown catkins (good on wet soils).

Beech Bright green leaves in spring.

Field maple Winged seeds and golden autumn foliage.

Common dogwood Rich autumn colour and green-flushed red stems in winter.

Gelder rose White flowers, then small red fruit and red autumn foliage.

■ HOW TO PLANT BARE-ROOTED PLANTS

1 Never let the plants dry out. Soak roots overnight before planting.

2 Trim longer roots if needed. Cut to the same length as the others and trim any damaged ends.

3 Prepare soil well by digging in plenty of organic matter.

4 Plant at the same depth as they were in the field before lifting. There'll be a mark on the stem.

5 Once planted, cut back the top by around a third (cutting just above a bud) to reduce stress and promote bushing out.

007: Road to a Million

Available from 10 Nov Amazon Prime Video

NO, MR BOND,” as Goldfinger so nearly put it, “I expect you to fly...” The glamour of travel and the exoticism of far-flung locations have always been key ingredients in the James Bond cocktail – and that’s as true as ever of the latest extension of the franchise, 007: Road to a Million, which starts on Amazon Prime this week.

The premise in this adventure game show series is that the Controller – Brian Cox, every bit as drolly sinister as in Succession, but noticeably less swear-y – dispatches pairs of contestants across the world to take on spy-style challenges and solve questions that could lead them to a £1 million prize. And, presumably, innuendo-laced closing-credit encounters with beautiful Bond girls/boys.

Sadly, it doesn’t look like the show’s amateur agents get any more lounge-time than their hero: just as we never see Sean Connery or Daniel Craig idly reading a Jackie Collins by the pool, or enjoying a pizza on the piazza, these guys are very much on a henchman’s holiday, working their way around such lovely locales as Venice, Jamaica and the Swiss Alps.

The rest of us, however, have a licence to chill – so here’s how to holiday in three classic Bond-film locations that are all revisited in the new series. Remember to order those vodka martinis shaken, not stirred...

LONDON LIBATIONS

Sure, you could stand outside the many office buildings, private clubs and Underground stations featured in films from 1962’s Dr No onwards – but if you want to actually enjoy your Bonding moments in the capital, give these a go instead. Start by replicating Pierce Brosnan’s high-speed river chase in The World Is Not Enough with a 45mph boat ride down the Thames (thamesribexperience.com). Then, for something more sedate, try Trafalgar Square’s National Gallery: it was in Room 34, beneath Turner’s exquisitely melancholic The Fighting Temeraire, that Daniel Craig met Ben Whishaw’s Q in Skyfall.

Mere steps away are Rules (rules.co.uk), London’s oldest restaurant – ask for “M’s table” to dine where Ralph Fiennes did in Spectre – and the Corinthia hotel (corinthia.com/london). The latter is one of London’s most luxurious hotels, and has a long acquaintance with espionage: during the Second World

The contestants in 007: Road to a Million aren’t there to enjoy the martinis. But with the right intelligence, you can be...

War, Room 424 was the first home of MI9. The shadowy Special Operations Executive also started there, with secret tunnels linking the building to nearby Whitehall.

Later, Daily Express artist Yaroslav Horak used it as MI6’s HQ in his Bond comic strips. More recently, the Corinthia made an appearance in No Time to Die and Skyfall. Perhaps more important than any of this is that its deliciously decadent bar, Velvet, serves seven different kinds of martini...

FROM VENICE WITH LOVE

Bond’s love affair with Venice is enduring. Starting in 1963, with Sean Connery’s From Russia with Love, running through 1979 and Roger Moore in Moonraker, it rises to a torrid climax with Daniel Craig’s first outing as the super-spy, 2006’s Casino Royale. You may not wish to re-enact the various betrayals, murders and dramatically sinking palazzi Bond endures, so start instead with a gondola

THE MAIN MAN
Brian Cox fronts 007: Road to a Million

FLY ANOTHER DAY

Main: St Mark's Square in Venice.
Below, from top: Ian Fleming's villa GoldenEye in Jamaica; Pierce Brosnan as Bond; and the River Thames in London ride down the Grand Canal like Roger Moore. At €80 for 40 minutes, you don't want to get stuck behind half a dozen couples doing the same route, so max out the romance factor by getting off the main canal thoroughfares. Your gondolier will take whatever route you request – though may demur at turning their boat into a hovercraft to whizz through St Mark's Square, as Moore's does.

For a push-the-vaporetto-out stay, it has to be the Cipriani (belmond.com/cipriani), where Craig moors his sailboat towards the end of Casino Royale. Separated from the city's tourist-thronged hub by half a mile of calm lagoon, it's an island of calm and discreet luxury.

The ducal splendour of the Doge's Palace (palazzoducale.visitmuve.it) is the highlight of many travellers' visits to La Serenissima, but aim to time your trip so you catch the sunset at its Bridge of Sighs: it makes an irresistibly seductive finale to the day, as Connery and Daniela Bianchi's Tatiana demonstrated at the end of From Russia with Love.

VILLA-INY IN JAMAICA

Ian Fleming's home-from-home in the West Indies has a double claim to be the spiritual birthplace of 007: first, the former naval commander wrote all 13 Bond books on the island; and second, the movie franchise arguably began here, an hour and two minutes into that first film, Dr No, when Ursula Andress emerged from the Caribbean Sea in a white two-piece. That was at Laughing Waters beach – still a lovely, quiet, waterfall-fringed little stretch of sand – beside the picturesque resort town Ocho Rios; but you can also visit key locations from perennial favourite Live and Let Die. That episode's crocodile-hopping escape was filmed at the Jamaica Swamp Safari Village (jamaicaswampsafarivillage.com), while Green Grotto Caves served as the secret underground lair of villain Dr Kananga, aka Mr Big (greengrotto-cavesja.com).

Choosing where to stay is straightforward enough: Fleming's villa, GoldenEye, is available to rent, as are another dozen or so properties that have been built on its sprawling grounds and now operate as a hotel (goldeneye.com).

Take it easy, though – unlike those would-be Bonds, you have all the time in the world... ED GRENBY

WHAT IS EQUITY RELEASE?

Could the equity in your home help you achieve your goals?

Homeowners aged 55 and over have the option of accessing the value that has built up in their property, without needing to sell their home. This is known as a lifetime mortgage, which is a type of equity release plan, and is a financial solution thousands of people choose to help them achieve their goals.

Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*, whose team will tell you everything you need to know about equity release, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Advice is required before proceeding with equity release, and a no-obligation personalised illustration will help you understand how much you could unlock, and the features and risks.

Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care. Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care.

Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

THE TAX ON TOGETHERNESS

Paul Lewis on the tax implications of maintaining a joint savings account

SEVERAL READERS HAVE emailed to ask how tax is worked out on a joint savings account that is owned by a couple.

Tax is due on savings account interest if either partner is a taxpayer and has used up their tax-free savings allowances. Banks and building societies tell HMRC the details of account-holders and the interest paid each tax year.

If there are two account-holders, it assumes the money is shared

So my preference is to separate joint savings into two individual accounts. That makes the calculation easier and more likely to be accurate. To save tax, move money from the taxpayer's account to the other's account until their tax-free allowances are all used up. If the money in the account is not owned in equal shares, you can inform HMRC of the split, but that complexity means it is even more important to have an account each.

'Always check that the correct amount of tax is being collected' equally and assesses each partner for tax. If one is a taxpayer and the other is not, the taxpayer is assessed for tax on half the income and the other half is tax-free. The partner who has tax due on savings interest should find that the tax code on their earnings or company pension is adjusted to collect the tax due.

That's the theory. But you should always check that the correct amount of tax is being collected, because HMRC sometimes gets its sums wrong – and also because the tax code is a good way to collect tax but not a good way to assess it.

THERE IS ONE word of warning about splitting a joint account into two. When one partner dies, all the money in a joint account becomes the property of the other immediately. That makes dealing with the expenses that inevitably follow much more straightforward than if there is an account just in the name of the deceased person.

It does not affect any Inheritance Tax due whether the account is joint or separated, as the deceased partner's share of a joint account counts as part of their estate. But most people do not pay Inheritance Tax and if you are married or civil partnered and leave your savings to your spouse, no tax is ever due on it.

Make friendship and support your legacy

One in every 13 older people in the UK is often lonely. Many go weeks, sometimes months, without speaking to anyone. As vital services move online and out of reach, some older people are becoming even more disconnected from a fast-changing world.

With the number of isolated older people set to rise, Age UK's friendship services will always be vital.

By leaving a gift in your will, you can help provide friendship and support to older people in the years to come. You'll help them share memories, laughs and struggles, and build lasting, life-changing friendships through weekly friendship calls. From giving an older person someone to turn to for support with money or practical problems, to helping them to make new friends in their community, your gift will mean they can begin to reconnect with life.

If you want to create a legacy of friendship and support and leave a world less lonely, we'd love to chat with you.

If you share our belief that lonely older people should be treated with kindness, dignity and respect, please call Jane and our Gifts in Wills team to learn about the impact a gift in your will could make. They'll be happy to answer any questions and give you the information you need to decide if this way of giving is right for you.

Thank you.

Word of the week Scrupulous

For the Romans, a scrupulus was a sharp pebble. This gave rise to the use of the word "scruple" to mean a cause of anxiety, as though a person afflicted by worry is walking with a sharp pebble in their shoe – one that would cause them to walk extremely carefully or "scrupulously".

Soon after, a scruple also became a unit of weight equivalent to 20 grains or 1/24 oz, as used by apothecaries. In fact, over its lifetime, the word has been, variously, a Roman measure of ten feet square, a minute, and one-twelfth of an inch. Each of these small measurements look back to the idea of a tiny pebble. A similarly stony story lies behind the word "calculate", which comes from the Latin calculus, a small pebble that was once used on an abacus.

TACKLING THE BIG ISSUES
Doctors' Emma Reid (Dido Miles) advised a troubled Nik Laverick (Evan Milton), who had been abused by his boyfriend

TALKING POINT

Is cancelling Doctors too painful a cut?

I'm so upset that the BBC has announced the cancellation of Doctors (weekdays BBC1) at the end of next year. The series is a highlight of the daytime schedule, among all the repeats and makeover shows. The storylines are interesting, the characters engaging and, over the years, it has tackled many difficult issues with sensitivity and clarity.

My late husband introduced me to Letherbridge when I retired and I feel as if I will be losing a link to my life with him if it goes.

Deborah Higgins Bristol

...So, the BBC has announced the end of Doctors, following recent decisions to cancel Holby City and reduce the number of episodes of Casualty. Is this simply about budgets or could it be that the corporation is under pressure to limit the number of programmes that might be critical of the state of the NHS in the run-up to a general election?

Perhaps Doctors will be replaced by a new version of Money for Nothing in which a worn-out NHS GP is recycled into a private doctor in a shiny surgery who charges £250 an appointment to tell the worried well to keep on taking the happy pills.

Sean Cusack Bristol

...A few months ago I would have been very sad to hear Doctors is being axed. But after they killed off Karen Hollins (the magnificent Jan Pearson) it seemed to lose its heart and soul – and its way.

Some of the new characters are unbelievable. And how can you believe in a modern medical centre where the doctors still do house calls, not to mention sorting out patients' housing and love lives and making them cups of tea? Sorry, Doctors, but it's time to go.

Lynn Picknett Croydon, south London

...Doctors is vastly superior to evening soaps like EastEnders. It's not rigidly confined to realist conventions; it often uses flashbacks and, occasionally, dream sequences. There's far less reliance on cliffhangers and sensationalism. It's also not afraid to tackle controversial political issues such as homelessness. And it has frequently won prizes at the British Soap Awards.

Dudley Jones Reading, Berkshire

...I'm so angry that Doctors is being taken off air. Is it because it shows the state of the NHS under this government? Having recently used one of the methods the series showed to save a person's life after a drug overdose, I think it's an invaluable as well as entertaining drama.

Philip Press
Weston-super-Mare, Somerset

...I've watched Doctors since the first episode in 2000 and was horrified to learn that it's being axed. Recent storylines have warned about not ignoring the symptoms of prostate cancer, the stress of working extra hours and the continued difficulties facing police forces. Maybe the BBC could reduce the endless number of cookery programmes and redirect the cash they save!

NOT JUST INCIDENTAL

Complaints are continually being made about obtrusive background music in TV dramas and documentaries. I would like to express my appreciation of the incidental music played on The Repair Shop (BBC1). They are perfect little pieces that enhance the visuals, and never intrude on the experts' dialogue.

Roz Rose Norwich, Norfolk

COX AS KING

I enjoyed reading the article about the actor Brian Cox (RT, 28 October) but I was surprised his finest role on BBC TV wasn't mentioned.

When I was 15 in 1978 I remember being transfixed by his marvellous performance as Henry II in The Devil's Crown. It was very well acted by the likes of Cox, Jane Lapotaire, Michael Byrne and John Duttine.

It seems to me that this would be an excellent candidate for a repeat on BBC4. I would love the chance to see it again.

Michael Flowers Hull, East Riding of Yorkshire

PAUL'S ON THE MOVE

What has happened to Paul Gambaccini, who used to host Pick of the Pops on Radio 2? I gather he has gone to Sunday evenings. I'm not happy as evening radio is not my thing these days and I loved his show on a Saturday lunchtime. Such a reassuring voice.

Was this a move of his own volition or have the BBC management movers been at it again?

Mary Heath Northampton
In a Radio 2 announcement of the move, Paul Gambaccini said: "This year marks the 25th anniversary of my happy relationship with Radio 2, which began with America's Greatest Hits. When I accepted the Pick of the Pops assignment in 2016, I was told it would be for between five and ten years. Here we are, smack dab in the middle, seven-and-a-half years later, and it is time for Chapter Three. I am delighted that on the new show I will have the opportunity to present neglected gems from the past century, be they album tracks, 7-inch B-sides or missed hits."

...I have nothing against Paul Gambaccini, but am truly sorry to see the end of Sunday Night Is Music Night. Formerly broadcast on Fridays, the programme has been on air since 1953 and its backbone throughout has been the BBC Concert Orchestra, celebrating the best of popular (as opposed to pop) music of all styles.

It saddens me that Radio 2 can no longer devote a couple of hours a week to a kind of music that still commands a huge following.

Anthony Wills London NW3

OFF THE BOIL

I must admit to being very disappointed in the BBC1 drama Boiling Point, which wholly failed to live up to the hype. In fact it failed to light the stove, let alone reach a rolling boil. Rather a waste of the talent of Stephen Graham, who had so little to do.

Thank goodness for subtitles, as often the dialogue was lost amid

WAVE IT ALL ABOUT

I wholeheartedly agree with Brian Christley (Feedback, 28 October) and his observation that some TV reporters and presenters make far too many hand gestures while facing the camera. Perhaps they are failed orchestra conductors and can't resist emphasising every word. Please tell them to stop it!

Wendy Hards

NO REVELATION

The Reckoning (BBC1) had great acting and high production values. However, I'm not sure what the point of it was. We already knew that Jimmy Savile was a monster, hiding in plain sight and dying unpunished. We already knew that institutions were reluctant to listen to and believe people who bravely told of their abuse. We already knew that he bamboozled Stoke Mandeville, Broadmoor et al, cleverly raising their profiles and attracting donations. So why make something that tells us nothing new?

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Heartbreakingly honest TV

Not since witnessing a young iguana evade death by racer snakes (Planet Earth II: Islands) has David Attenborough (below left) drawn such emotion from me as during the first episode of Planet Earth III (23 October BBC1). Awed by the ingenuity of archer fish, captivated by fragile Caribbean flamingo chicks, and devastated by a Raine Island green turtle thudding between rocks, only to pass out from exhaustion mere metres from the shore. Heartbreakingly honest TV.

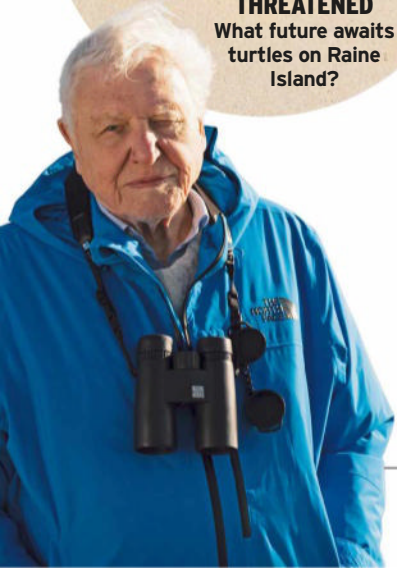

The behind-the-scenes segment illustrated the knife edge we're on because of climate change. This should be compulsory viewing, especially in schools. We may have just one generation left before the balance fully tips and the impact on all species, including our own, is irreparably felt.

MYSTERY SOLVED

Who was the dancer on our Radio 1 cover?

When Radio 1 hit the airwaves in September 1967, it was Tony Blackburn whose voice was first heard on the "swinging new radio service". RT, however, went with someone different on the cover: a young woman dancing to the music on her transistor radio. Dubbed "the Radio 1 Dolly Bird" she came to be the embodiment of a new pop era at the BBC.

When RT came to select ten key covers from our history for our 100th anniversary, this had to be one of them. But who was this uncredited model? Reader Glenn Reuben answered our appeal and recognised her as Linda Lawrence, a member of the BBC's song and dance group the Young Generation.

From her home in Spain, Linda tells RT, "I went for an audition and they told me I'd got it. Then they said – the BBC being cheapskates – can you provide shoes in orange? So I dyed a pair of my own shoes with Lady Esquire." It was a good match for the Radio 1 logo printed on her dress, which was made from paper. "It was massive at the back, with great bulldog clips attached. To make it stand out, they had a fishing line pulling it from the side."

"Dolly Bird" isn't a term we would use today, but Linda says, "That was fine at the time." After our photoshoot Linda was asked to star in a short promotional film for Radio 1. "I had to be in bed and when Tony Blackburn's programme started on the radio I jumped out of bed, ran downstairs and got into a car – my Morris 1100 – and drove off," she explains. "I don't even know if it was aired."

It did make it to the screen – the BBC archives reveal a specially shot Radio 1 trailer was broadcast on BBC1 before Juke Box Jury, three days before Radio 1 launched. But sadly the film hasn't survived.

For Linda, this was just one of her occasional jobs away from the dancing group. "We were told not to talk to the stars. But if they came into rehearsal, it was great to say I'd seen Tom Jones, Tony Bennett, Sammy Davis or the Osmonds."

Did anyone recognise her as the Radio 1 dancer? "Much, much later people would say, 'That's you!', but it didn't make me famous at the time. All the excitement was for Tony Blackburn. I was just the girl on the cover – that was it!"

NUMBER'S UP?

Watching The Fall of the House of Usher (Netflix), I noticed that the apartment Roderick Usher (Bruce Greenwood) lives in is number 611. I wonder if this is serendipity or a homage to the brilliant Uncanny (Radio 4, podcast and BBC2)? All fans of Uncanny know the ghastly things that went on in Room 611...

BIG ZUU

The rapper-turned-chef on Strictly – and why his Bafta win made him angry

What's the view from your sofa?

I've got a massive sofa. Big up DFS! They gave it to me for some social media posts. It has charging points, reclines, turns into a bed – it's proper cool. The TV is also massive – 82 inches. On the shelf I've got a few accolades – the Bafta and some broadcast awards, pictures of the lads, a painting from my sister and a fake plant.

You live with four of your friends in London – who controls the remote?

Me! I'm a very good selector – I watch a lot of Action Bronson's FK That's Delicious and other food bloggers on YouTube. I don't watch much terrestrial TV, but I have been watching Strictly.

I wouldn't have had you down as a Strictly fan...

I watched the first episode with my mum because she loves it and since then I've been keeping up – Bobby Brazier is the most beautiful man to ever live!

Would you ever go on Strictly? Do you have rhythm?

They've asked me before... Yes, I've got rhythm! You should be able to tell! I can't do a quick step or a flamenco or whatever – but I'd try. If I went on Strictly, I'd want to have a love scandal. Do a Stacey Dooley. Sorry Stace!

So, you're a natural on the dance floor – but were you always a good cook? When did you start?

I was nine. My mum was pregnant and I did it to help around the house. I was good from the off – I'm basically Gordon Ramsay! I've always been a young fat man. Cooking is in my blood.

What were you like as a youngster?

Annoying, but smart. I was actually inducted into Gifted and Talented [a government scheme for bright pupils] at my school by Boris Johnson! I went to a humble school in Kilburn, and he came to visit while he was running for London mayor and did a speech. We didn't even know who he was – everyone just booed him. At the end he asked a number of students to stay behind. Naturally, I thought I was getting into trouble. When everyone else left he was like, "Welcome to Gifted and Talented" and then he taught us Latin for an hour. I didn't listen.

How does your TV set-up now compare to that of your childhood?

We moved around a lot – but I did have an 11-inch TV in my room. It had an aerial which I had to bend to get it to work. I used to hate it when the aerial started fuzzer-ing and going "grrrr" – especially if Match of the Day didn't play properly. I'd be like "This is why I'm poor!" You only got one Match of the Day. There was no iPlayer! Bad life! I'm joking, I'm all right. I wasn't rich, but I had a TV in my room.

How did your mum take it when you dropped out of studying social work at university to pursue music?

She thought I was possessed by the devil – it's very African. I was the first person in our family to go to university. It was a shame thing – people looked at her like she'd failed. Now, she's my biggest fan!

MY LIFE IN TV

SNACK AND DRINK OF CHOICE

Sweet and salty popcorn and orange juice.

FIRST TV MEMORY?
EastEnders, EastEnders and more EastEnders.

How did you go from chart-topping grime artist to TV chef?

I made two episodes of a cooking show on YouTube to promote my music. A developer at a production company saw it and then he hit me up and asked me if I wanted to make a pilot for a show. I didn't even know what a pilot was! I got my mates Tubsey and Hyder involved, and the rest is history.

You've won two Baftas for Big Zuu's Big Eats. How did it feel to win?

When I looked out at the audience from the stage, I thought, "We've done it. We deserve this. We've worked so hard." Everyone works hard to make a TV show – but our story of who we are [Zuu and his co-hosts] is so different. In my acceptance speech, I'm angry because of what I had to say. I had to talk about working class people and representation in television. I should have been celebrating. I was upset that I had to use my moment to do that – but I was also happy to try and make a change.
